Computer 'Figures In' On Peach Bottom Farm

PEACH BOTTOM (Lancaster Co.) — Ed Zug didn't like the long hours, so he quit.

Quit doing things the old way, that is.

Once upon a time, Zug, a Peach Bottom dairy farmer and Young Farmers Award winner, would have to "sit there all those hours and add up those columns of figures to get our balance sheet each month."

But not anymore. In 1983, Zug purchased an Apple IIe computer that "best suited what I was already doing," he said. Ever since then, Zug's farm has benefited from the computer in many ways.

Raises holsteins

Zug grows corn, alfalfa, and oats on 153 acres on his farm near Peach Bottom, Pennsylvania. He raises 50 holsteins and 4 jerseys.

For the past few years, the Zugs — his wife Debbie and children Irene, 19 and twins Emily and Brian, 15 — have been operating the dairy farm. The four jerseys were added recently to the herd.

"Last year, when my twins started FFA in ninth grade, they decided they wanted to have cows as their projects, so they got jerseys," said Zug.

But that's not so unusual for a dairy farm. What may be so unusual is the time and importance the family puts into the computer in helping to manage the farm budget.

Sitting there

"I was keeping the record books all by hand and I didn't like sitting there all those hours," Zug said. He was spending a great deal of time placing figures into the book and wondered if there was a way to track expenses and income easier and with greater detail.

In 1983, Zug bought an Apple computer with an account program

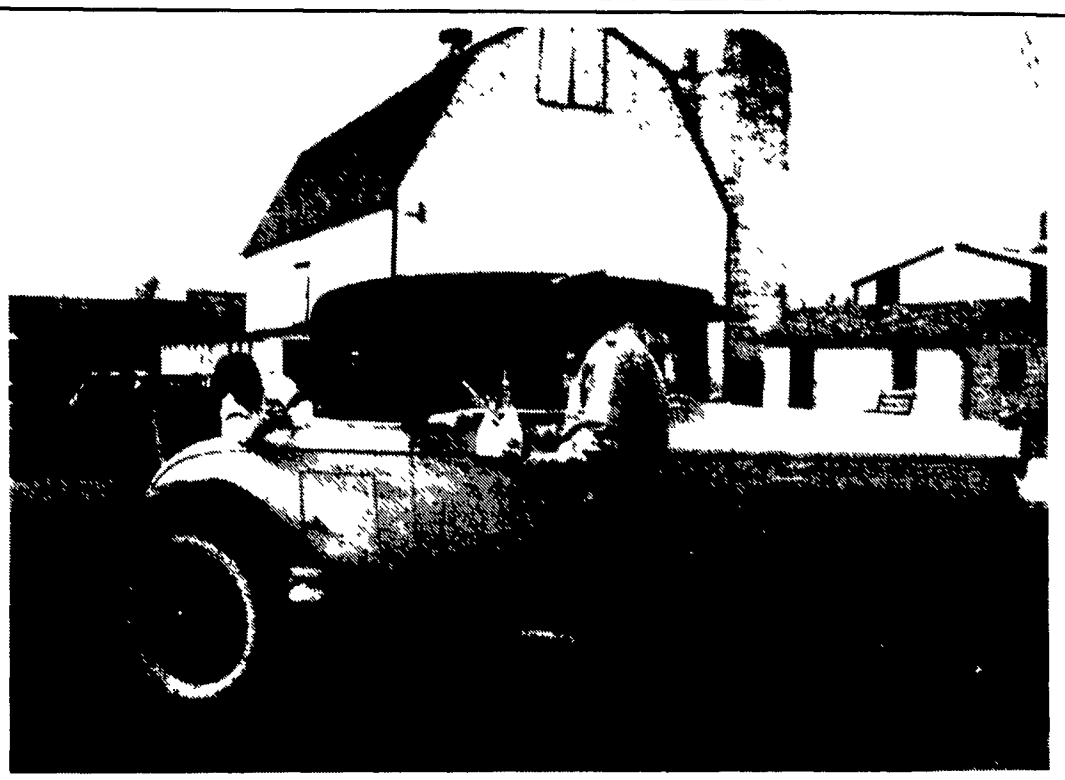
Ed Zug, a Peach Bottom dairy farmer, is "very happy" with his computer system. Accounting software helps him track farm income and expenses.



"Generations Of Milk Drinkers"

This photo won the photography contest at the recent Maryland Holstein Convention for Matthew Iager, Maple Lawn Farm, Fulton MD. Ag Day Activities Feature Pennsylvania Food, Drinks

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — At the state capitol on Tuesday, Gov. Robert Casey signed a proclamation and declared the state's first Agriculture Day of the 1990s.

He also announced the formation of a nutrient management task force.

The special state Agriculture Day observance coincided with National Agriculture Day and the start of National Agriculture Week, which ends Monday.

Casey said such an observance is necessary because "Agriculture is the powerful engine driving Pennsylvania's economy."

The proclamation he signed notes that "55,000 farm families produce $3.3 billion annually in crops and livestock and generate another $35 billion in related economic activity.

"Pennsylvania ranks first nationally in the production of mschrooms, milk chocolate, pretzels and potato chips, along with the number of licensed bakeries."

The document also claims that the state's production of milk, frozen dairy products, chickens, eggs, cheese, peaches, apples, butter, tart cherries, grapes, corn and oats ranks it among the top five states.

In addition to the salutory remarks to the state's farmers and ag businesses, Casey announced the formation of an eight-member task force that is to research and recommend strategies for better managing nutrient pollution to both surface water and groundwater in Pennsylvania.

According to a statement, Casey established "the governor's Task Force on Non-Point Source Nutrient Management to make recommendations on how best to reduce the contribution of nutrients to surface and groundwater pollution."

Chaired by Rep. Jeffrey W. Coy, (D) Franklin County, who is also a member of the state House Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee, the task force has been given six months to come up with a report.

Apparently, the group is designed as a review and decision-making group and will not initiate any new research in order to make recommendations. However, the group could suggest more research as a result of its review.

Water, Land Improvements Recognized By Conservationists

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Recognized for their excellence in practicing conservation, the Weaver Homestead captured the most prestigious award handed out by the Lancaster County Conservation District on March 15.

The homestead, operated by brothers Donald and Nelson Weaver, is located along White Oak Road in Earl Township. It took four years and 41 soil probes to implement nutrient management that has eliminated the farmland's need for fertilizer during the last three years.

According to Don Robinson, LCCD director, the Weavers have long been an example of leadership and inspiration to others in conservation. Starting in 1975, they installed a sod waterway, contour strips, put in an ag waste storage system along with stormwater control.

LCCD's 39th annual dinner meeting held at New Holland was an occasion to recognize farmers, communities, developers and others who work to conserve land and water.

(Watch for an on-farm interview with the Donald and Nelson Weaver families next week).

The recipient of the 1990 outstanding stormwater management award went to the Meadows Edge Subdivision. John Luecker, developer of the 60-acre subdivision, worked with Rettew Associations, Inc.; E.B. Abel Construction; and B.R. Kreider Excavators to construct a 900 feet waterway and two detention basins for stormwater control.

The recipient of the public service award is St. Anne's Nursing Home and Village, which completed a 900-feet stream improvement project.

National Milk Proposes Alternative To Price Cut

KARL BERGER
Special Correspondent

FREDERICK, Md.— The debate on dairy policy for the 1990 farm bill is once again shaping up as a battle between those who want to cut prices and those who want to control production.

On the price cutting side, the Bush administration has weighed in with a plan that would continue the current policy of reducing the government's milk support price in response to surplus production. The proposal would give Secretary of Agriculture Clayton Yeutter more latitude in adjusting the support price annually, a flexibility that could translate into cuts of 75 cents or even $1 a hundredweight.

On the supply control side, at least partially, is the farm bill proposal recently unveiled by the National Milk Producers Federation, the Washington-based lobby for most of the nation's dairy cooperatives.

The National Milk plan has

Delmarva Broiler Fryer Market

Wednesday, March 21, 1990

Movement of ready-to-cook whole fryers was fair today. Buyer interest in additional product was very light and some reported canceling regular commitments. Supplies were fully adequate and slow to clear. Less than trucklot asking prices were steady at 58-66 cents. Live supplies were adequate, with average weights generally desirable. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. The trade sentiment was cautiously steady. In the parts complex, supplies of cutlets were adequate, whole breasts were irregular but at least adequate, dark meat items were in close balance to instances short of current needs, and wings were fully adequate to ample.

Wednesday, March 21, 1990

Trucklot buying interest was limited to light spotty sales at unchanged to lower prices on most parts. Leg items were in closest balance and no more than adequate. Breasts, both whole and line run were slow in clearing and spot trading was noted as low as 87 cents on line run. Skinned boneless breasts were in fairly good balance for the mixed and irregular demand; however, light trading was reported at $1.88. Wings were fully adequate to ample with some offers at sharply lower levels attracting only scattered interest.

Agway has the top fielders in both leagues.

Loyalties run deep. Whether you're talking ball teams or seed corn. That's why we offer you a fielder's choice of the best seed corn brands in both leagues. Nationally ranked DEKALB and AGWAY—the eastern regional favorite.

Together they make a great team. Not only are they backed by the world's largest seed research program, they are the most extensively tested seed corn varieties in the East. Each delivers outstanding performance under the wide variety of soil types and growing conditions characteristic of the eastern region.

For more bushels of grain or tons of silage per acre, see your AGWAY store or DEKALB farmer dealer today. With a lineup like ours—five new high performance hybrids for 1990—you could end up in another league altogether!

The market tone was generally steady to fully steady. Trading was limited as most buyers restricted purchases to fill-in requirements. Raw materials increased in their availability but most breakers worked with minimal floor stocks as they avoided building unwanted high priced inventories.

Performance. That's the bottom line. Performance that's measured by such characteristics as standability, grain quality, disease resistance and, most important, yields.

You'll get that performance from Funk's G-Hybrids like G-4543, the top yielding hybrid in Delaware Performance Trials in 1986 and 1987. Or Funk's G-4626, one of the highest yielding varieties in southern Pennsylvania and Maryland during the past three years. Or from Hoffman soybeans like Hoffman 359, a leader in 1987 Maryland trials in Queenstown and Quantico.

Get your ticket to superior performance by contacting your local Hoffman Seed representative or our Landisville office. Call toll free: 1-800-233-0137. In PA: 1-800-732-0456.

New England: Two words can describe the week. sunny, snowy. So many mists in March we see, so many frosts in May will be Greater New York-New Jersey: Sprinkles, rain, sleet, snow It's all coming, one by one this week April begins cold and drizzly; that's grizzly.

Middle Atlantic Coastal: Rain and briefly mild, then the precipitation turns to heavy snow. April's Fool brings a snowstorm and that's no joke.

Piedmont & Southeast Coastal: Sunny, rain, then cold April starts with rain Does that ensure May flowers? You'll have to wait to see.

OPINION

FFA Teachers Send Open Letter To Pennsylvania Governor

Dear Governor Casey,

We are writing to protest your elimination of the Pennsylvania FFA from your 1990-1991 budget proposal. We understand the need for a balanced budget, but over the past twenty years agricultural education funds have already been drastically cut. You are giving agricultural education the final ax. Do you really want to do this?

In the state of Pennsylvania, agriculture is the number one employer with 20% of the jobs available being agriculturally related. FFA is not a club, but a vital part of agriculture education curriculum as deemed by Congress first in 1917 with the Smith-Hughes Act and then again with Public Law 740 in 1950. FFA is the hands-on tool by which agriculture education is taught. The largest agriculture high school and the largest FFA in the United States is here in this state in the city of Philadelphia. W.B. Saul has been a model for other states to follow. Do you realize how your cut will affect every part of the state, not just the rural areas?

The National Research Council in "Understanding Agriculture-New Directions for Education" has stated that "Most Americans know very little about agriculture, its social and economic significance in the United States, and particularly, its links to human health and environmental quality." Furthermore, it states, "Few systematic educational efforts are made to teach or otherwise develop agricultural literacy in students of any age. Although children are taught something about agriculture, the material tends to be fragmented, frequently outdated, usually only farm oriented, and often negative or condescending in tone."

The agriculture science education in this state needs more emphasis, not elimination. All of the states surrounding Pennsylvania have made this commitment....and the agricultural impact on the economy of those states is less than Pennsylvania's. In general, all of education is crying for more hands-on experience in the teaching of math and science. FFA and agriculture education already do this and have for fifty years. Why delete a program that has a proven success record in building leadership, not only in agriculture but also in producing productive and concerned citizens?

Farm Forum

Editor:

Read your column in Sat. March 17 paper on Salmonella and chicken testing.

It is already solved by me. Salmonella comes to the chicken through feed. The feed is polluted with fish waste meals and ocean by-products. These should be eliminated from all kinds of feeds. You test these waste products and you will find Salmonella in them. That's why turkeys taste bad.

I stopped feeding laying mash to my chickens and raised chickens and picked eggs over 70 years.

I only feed my chickens homegrown grains and I don't have that trouble. I eat raw eggs anytime I want to. You only make farmers earning a living harder by making new regulations to farm. You are making a market for imports for the American millionaires to make a killing by the poverty to the Pennsylvania farmers. The more regulations, the less food, mister. Think — think.

NOW IS THE TIME

By Jay Irwin

To Increase Pasture Production

One of the best ways to improve permanent pasture is to apply lime and plant food, practice rotational grazing and clip them regularly. This is quicker, cheaper and involves less risk than tearing up the old sod and reseeding. Most permanent pastures have sufficient seed of desirable grass species. The only thing they need is a little tender loving care and the opportunity to grow, and to recover from grazing pressures. Thus, fertility and rotational grazing are very beneficial. The more paddocks you have, the better it is. If your acreage is limited for your size herd, restrict the amount of time cattle and livestock are permitted to graze. Don't let them trample the grass unnecessarily by allowing them to roam freely over the pasture while not grazing. After a paddock has been grazed, it can be clippd to control weed growth and to keep the grass young and nutritious.

To Evaluate Winter Wheat Topdressing

During this season of the year many farmers ask the question, does winter wheat need, fertilizing? According to Agronomists, topdressing with fertilizer may or may note be a good idea. There are several things that should be considered before making the decision.

In the first place, do not topdress winter wheat with nitrogen fertilizer if the wheat is to be overseeded with clover or alfalfa. Nitrogen causes heavy growth of wheat which may smother out the new seeding.

On the other hand, winter wheat fields that have come through the winter looking thin, should be topdressed. Use only a straight nitrogen fertilizer, such as urca. Topdressing winter wheat with phosphate or potash has not given any increased wheat yields.

Apply the nitrogen fertilizer in early spring at the rate of 30-40 pounds of actual nitrogen per acre.

To Be Aware of a New Velvetleaf Weed Control

Velvetleaf is a large weed that is becoming a problem in more and more of our fields. Velvetleaf seeds are large and can germinate from great depths, thus escaping control by many of our herbicide programs. According to Glenn Shirk, Extension Dairy Agent, USDA microbiologists at the University of Missouri have found a plant bug that feeds on Velvetleaf seeds. The bugs also introduce microorganisms into the soil that cause the seeds to rot. In their trials, weed seed germination has been reduced to as low as 1%. The bug overwinters in the south, but it may not overwinter well in our more northern climates.

To Plan Rhododendron and Azalea Plantings

It's not too early to think about locations for rhododendrons and azaleas in spring landscape plans.

Both rhododendrons and azaleas will grow in full sun, but semi-shade is desirable. Too much sun makes the plants spindly and open, and usually they develop fewer flowers. Plants on northern exposures, or otherwise protected from too much winter sun (especially early morning sun) can usually stand more cold than those on southern exposures.

Northern exposures provide more constant temperature conditions. Also, on northern exposures, plants enter the dormant period earlier in the fall and remain dormant later in the spring. Protection from winter winds also helps.

It is very important to locate rhododendrons and azaleas on soils which are well drained.

HOW DO YOU SAY "I AM NOT!"?
March 25, 1990

Background Scripture:
John 18:15-27.
Devotional Reading:
Romans 7:15-25a.

The maid's question was direct: "Are not you also one of this man's disciples?" Peter's response was no less emphatic and direct: "I am not."

Peter would not later be able to say that he didn't understand the question or that his reply had been misunderstood. It was a clearcut case of denial on his part. What could have made him give such an answer in light of his earlier pledge in the upper room: "Lord, why cannot I follow you now? I will lay down my life for you" (13:47). Had he not meant this vow? I think he was quite sincere at that moment. He said it and he meant it. But in the courtyard of Annas, his fear was greater than his loyalty.

THREE DENIALS

Can you not understand how Peter felt? Have you never made a vow which you didn't keep? Have you never backed down on good intentions because you were afraid? I have, and for pretty much the same reason that Peter did. I was afraid. Afraid of what? Afraid of being thought different from other people. Afraid of being thought weak or not a "regular fellow," or even unsophisticated. Yes, at times in my life, I have been a closet Christian — willing to practice in secret what I didn't want anyone to know publicly. I like to tell myself that, if I had been there with Peter, I wouldn't have said "I am not," but who knows what one will say until we actually stand where Peter did.

Jesus had foretold Peter's lapse of loyalty that night in the Upper Room. "Will you lay down your life for me? Truly, truly, I say to you, the cock will not crow til you have denied me three times" (13:38). And that's exactly what happened at the house of Annas. Can you imagine how remorseful Peter must have felt shortly thereafter? Despite his protestations of loyalty, he had betrayed the Master, just as surely as Judas did.

WHY AND HOW?

But there is a big different between Judas and Peter. Peter was redeemed, while Judas wasn't. Terrible as Peter's denial was, God was able to free Peter from his guilt and the disciple became God's great apostle. On the contrary, Judas never recovered from his own treachery. Was it because God could not forgive Judas? No, I think it was because Judas could not forgive himself. Something in his nature kept him from seeking Jesus' forgiveness. Perhaps he was just too proud!

But the important question is not why Peter denied our Lord, but why do we? Or better, perhaps, how we deny him. In what ways do you fail to fulfill your vows to Christ? When do you let him down? How are you disloyal to him? In other words, how do you say "I am not" one of his disciples?

If Peter had been my trusted disciple, I don't know that I would have forgiven him. Yet, because Jesus was willing to redeem Peter, he saved a life that would have been otherwise lost to the church. There can be life after we've said. "I am not."

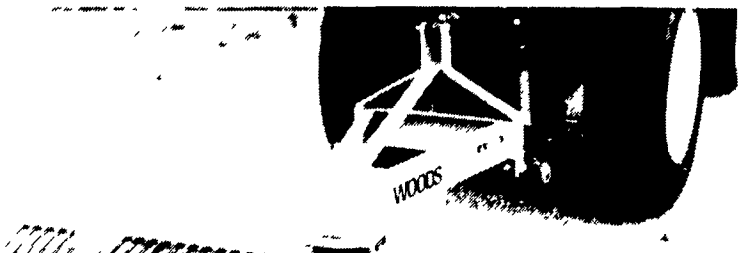
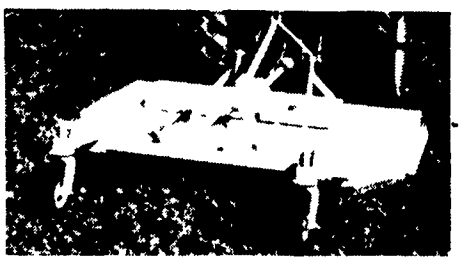
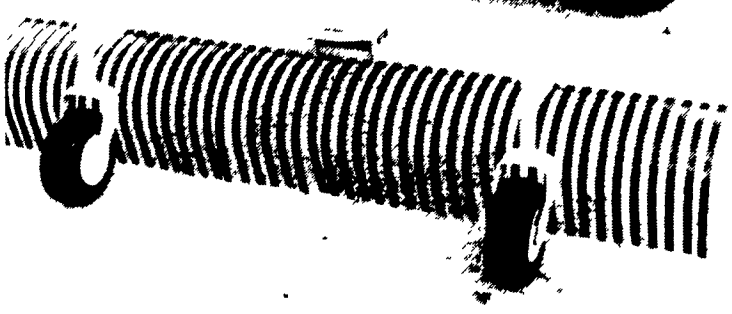
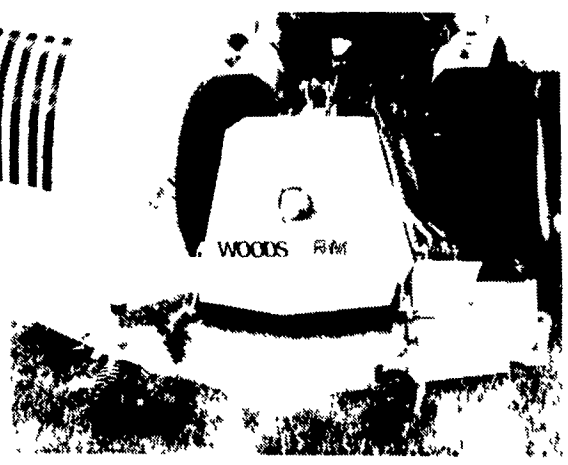
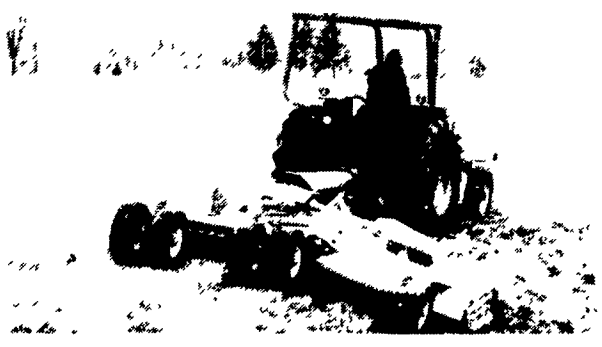
One tree doesn't make a Woods











Nor does just one product. That's why when Woods introduced the world's first successful tractor powered rotary shredder back in 1947, they didn't rest on their laurels. Instead, they continued to apply outstanding engineering expertise producing equipment packed with performance, reliability and value. The results: a line-up of over 50 different products including mowers, cutters, rear scraper blades, backhoes and specialty machines. The best that money can buy.

Farmers Optimistic About 1990

BY BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin Co. Correspondent

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Farmers in Franklin County are looking forward to the 1990 growing season "with optimism, as usual," according to John Shearer, director of the Penn State Cooperative Extension in Franklin County.

Sufficient rainfall, good livestock prices, and a higher-than-ever milk price in 1989 helped to bring local farmers into the new decade in fairly good shape.

The large amounts of rainfall in the spring and summer of 1989 were a mixed blessing, however. "Because of the rain, it was hard to get some crops in," said Jere Wingert, who farms 800 acres in St. Thomas.

"As a whole, 1989 was better than 1988, for local farmers," Shearer said. "In Franklin County, we're largely dairy, and milk prices have been favorable the last half of 1989."

In terms of crop production, only one crop did better in 1989 than it had in 1988, corn, the county's largest field crop. Farmers raise about 69,000 acres of corn here yearly.

"Oats, barley, and wheat had significantly lower yields. Alfalfa hay and other hays generally had a lower yield and lower quality in 1989," Shearer said.

Wayne Kuhns, president of the Pennsylvania Crop Management Association and the Franklin County Dairy Nutrition Service, agreed. The abundant rainfall "gave us a good yield, but left us with low quality forages," Kuhns Said.

"The commercial vegetable operations in the county did a bigger dollar volume in 1989 than in 1988 due to expansion in acreage and better growing condition," Shearer said.

Dairy farmers have recently been receiving the highest-ever price for their milk. While Kuhns thinks that the price will drop in 1990, he does not think it will go as low as experts predict.

Shearer said the general feeling among farmers is that the price will be good for at least a few months. "It's hard to predict," he said. "It takes a while to bring production back after it has dropped below consumer demand, which is what brought about the good price."

Another factor triggering the current price was the European economic community's reduction of exports of dairy products to the United States.

Kuhns, who milks 80 cows on his Warm Spring Road farm, said pending legislation on pesticides and other environmental concerns will have an impact on farming in the 1990s. "Farmers need to get involved to help make some of these decision," he said.

New technology will also affect farming. "We need to avail ourselves of new technology and professional services as they are introduced to us," Kuhns said, "and adopt the ones that will make our farming operations more productive."

Wingert, who raises 180 sows and 140 steers, looks for livestock prices, which are set by meat packers, to remain steady in 1990. The auctions and the meat packers set livestock prices. Wingert sells his beef cattle at the Greencastle Livestock Auction, while his hogs go directly to the packer, Cloverbloom. His corn crop, which was shelled for hog feed, was good in 1989.

The atmosphere in Franklin County's orchards is not as upbeat, however. "The 1960s and 1970s were good," according to Jerry Edwards, owner of Mountain Brook Orchards in St. Thomas. "The 1980s were rough. Within a 150-mile radius of Chambersburg, 12,000 acres of fruit went out of production in the '80s." Edwards cited government regulations concerning migrant labor and pesticides as reasons for the loss of acreage.

Apples and peaches are in oversupply now, which has caused a reduction in prices for the grower. "The housewife hasn't seen a change (in the price of fruit) because the chain stores have a 300 percent mark-up," Edwards said. "One-third of what you pay is what the grower gets."

Fruit prices in the United States are determined by supply and demand in the marketplace. "If you can't sell at a profit, the trees go out," Edwards said.

He declined to speculate on what the 1990s might bring for local fruit growers. "It depends on crop size over the nation and locally," he said.

Edwards, who has 600 acres of apples and 150 of peaches, also noted that it is impossible to swing in and out of the fruit market quickly.

With other agricultural products, if any given year is poor, the farmer can reduce his crop acreage or number of animals for the next year. With orchards, however, the trees — which were planted at considerable investment — are in the ground. "They will produce for many years," Edwards said, "whether the market is good or depressed."

Consultants Can Help Run Farm

YORK (York Co.) — Save time, save money, and increase profitability. That's the message Franklin and Fulton County farmers received recently in their mail.

The Franklin County Crop Management Association (CMA) and York Farm Credit announce a promotional program where farmers can save time, money, and increase profitability by having professional consultants monitor their fields.

The professional consultants at CMA provide the correct agronomic recommendations to help manage pesticide and fertilizer use. The savings of one pesticide application can more than pay for one year's acreage fee.

York Farm Credit, in recognition of the valuable service provided by the Franklin County CMA, has offered to pay the $35.00 membership fee for the first five new members to sign up prior to April 1, 1990.

For more information on CMA, contact Martin Krone at 263-9226.

WESTFALIA SYSTEMAT

SIDE BY SIDE MILKING PARLOR

This exciting new milking parlor design is based on the concept of standing the cows side by side in the milking parlor and milking from behind-between the rear legs.

NEW

Safe...
Clean...

SIDE BY SIDE MILKING PARLOR SYSTEM COMES IN TWO BASIC DESIGNS:

The FAST EXIT model provides the ultimate in safety and unsurpassed efficiency in a milking facility.

The MEDIUM EXIT stall is an economic alternative for retro-fitting an existing facility and greatly increasing productivity.

The kicker rail prevents the cow from being able to kick backwards and hit the operator, thus providing the safest method for milking cows.

The elevated gutter catches the manure before it has a chance to dirty the equipment or operator.

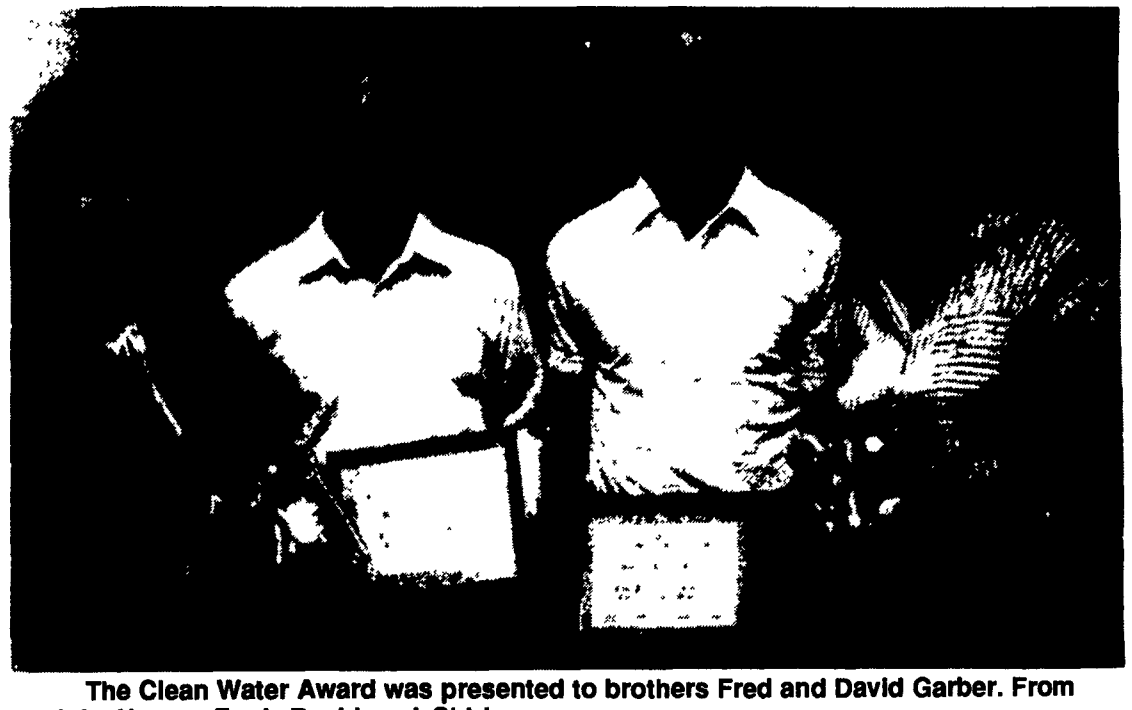
award. The dairy farm is operated by two brothers Fred and Dave Garber and their families.

Robert Mowrer, Conservation District association director, received the outstanding service award for his work with the Lancaster Youth Conservation School. Known as the founding father for the school that was first held in 1979, Mowrer has helped improve and acquire funds for it.

Two students who attended the school, Gretchen Frederick and Michael Lindemuth, received the youth conservation school public service award.

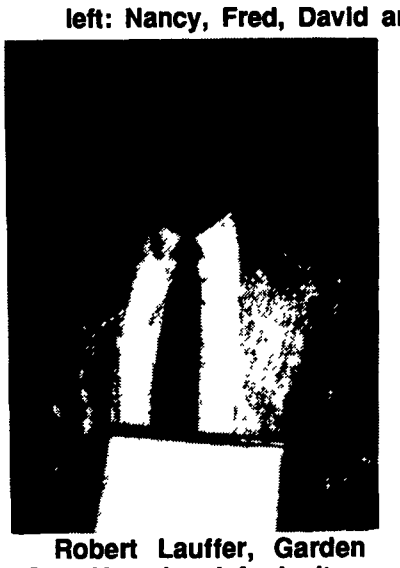
According to Hugh Hetzler, it took special people, needs, funds, programs and cooperation for Martin Greenleaf Jr., to earn the special project award. Greenleaf's stream, Gables Run, borders both Lancaster and Chester Counties, and had caused excess streambank erosion and unnecessary water nutrification caused by cattle having free access to both sides of the streambank. Working with Hugh Hetzer, former manager of Chester Water Authority; Kerry Kalupson, vo-ag teacher; FFA students; Colerain Township supervisors; DER and the county conservation district, Greenleaf was able to stream back the erosion and nutrification.

The LCCD dinner meeting included a Grant Heilman Photograhy presentation portrait of Mid Atlantic Farmland to the audience of 200.



The Clean Water Award was presented to brothers Fred and David Garber. From left: Nancy, Fred, David and Shirley.

Huge Hetzler, left, presented Martin Greenleaf a special community service award for work on the Gables Run stream cattle crossing, which stopped excess streamback erosion and water nutrification.



Robert Lauffer, Garden Spot Vocational Agricultural teacher, earned the outstanding educator award from the Lancaster Conservation District.

Why Test With Prostaph?

Editor's Note: Linda Scibilia, lab manager at Pennsylvanin DHIA answers questions about the Prostaph test in a two part series. These articles will be informative to all dairy producers regardless if they are DHIA members or not. Here's part 1.

Linda Scibilia
Manager, Lab Operations
PA DHIA

The Prostaph test for detection of Staph aureus mastitis is now available from Pennsylvania DHIA. The first questions usually asked are (1) Why should I worry about Staph aureus mastitis in particular?; and (2) Why should I do the Prostaph test rather than culture?

Due to the nature of the Staph aureus organism, this type of mastitis can be particularly difficult to control, especially after it has established itself in the herd.

Staph aureus is a leading cause of mastitis and can go undetected because it frequently remains subclinical; in other words, you cannot tell by looking at milk from the cow that she is fostering an active infection.

Staph aureus is highly contagious, persists in the udders of infected cows, and is spread primarily during the milking process when contaminated milk from infected cows comes in contact with the teats of uninfected cows.

Because of our knowledge of Staph aureus we can, if we can identify carriers of the Staph aureus organism, develop appropriate management plans to minimize the problem.

Use of the DHIA Prostaph test is very convenient for current DHIA members. The same milk sample the supervisor takes for the regular monthly test will be used to test for Staph.

No aseptic sample is necessary as is true for culture. The cost for the Prostaph test is only $2.60 per sample, and having the test run is as simple as contacting the regular DHIA supervisor.

Non DHIA members can also use the DHIA Prostaph testing service. The cost of the test to non-members is $3.00 per sample.

An individual report will be generated for the non-member herd and will be mailed out as soon as the analysis has been run. For non-members interested in the test, the DHIA supervisor servicing a particular area can be determined by calling 1-800-DHI-TEST.

Culturing a herd can be an expensive and very time consuming process for both the herd owner and the veterinarian. Prostaph is a rapid and easily obtainable test, and the results can be used by a veterinarian to assist the dairyman in Staph aureus management.

One important difference to note, however, is that Prostaph and culture do not really look for the same thing.

When a herd is cultured, aseptic milk samples are obtained, and used to "grow" bacteria if they are present. If the Staph aureus bacteria are present in the sample they will grow and are identified.

Prostaph, on the other hand, is looking for Staph aureus specific antibodies which the cow has produced in response to infection. The test is highly specific to Staph aureus antibodies, so infection by other organisms will not be detected by this test.

What Is The Difference Between Organism And Antibody?

Aseptic samples can be difficult to obtain. Culture simply confirms or denies the presence of bacteria in the sample taken. Accuracy is highly dependent on obtaining a sample that has not been contaminated with Staph aureus from any other source, and does not tell us whether the cow is actually fighting an active infection.

Staph aureus organisms present in the teat canal, or udder will cause a culture to show positive for Staph, even if the cow is able to successfully fight off the bacteria and is able to self cure.

Looking for antibody will indicate whether the cow has initiated an immune system response to a bacterial infection. It tells us that there is antibody being produced, but gives no indication of the protective ability of that antibody.

An immune system response is not immediate. It takes several days, and sometimes weeks for antibodies to be formed and circulated in response to the bacterial presence.

This means that the bacteria could be present in the udder, but the Prostaph test could still give a negative result if the cow is not yet having an active immune response.

By the same right, after a cow has had an active infection and is cured, the Staph aureus specific antibodies will remain present in the bloodstream for some period of time.

This means that a cow which did have a Staph aureus infection, but is now cured, may continue to show some level of antibody (possibly showing positive or suspect) with the Prostaph test until the level of circulating antibodies drops back to pre-infection levels.

How Do The Pro-Staph Results Compare To The Results Of Culture?

Early studies indicated that Prostaph results and culture results agreed 98% of the time. A study done at Penn State, however, has not indicated that level of correlation.

In that study we found that approximately 50% of the cows testing positive with the Pro-staph test showed negative culture results.

One condition which could cause this discrepancy is a cow that has had a Staph aureus infection, is now cured, but who's circulating antibody level has not yet dropped. A cow with a blind quarter which is infected with Staph aureus could also have this effect, since blind quarters are not typically cultured.

The Penn State study showed that a cow testing negative with the Prostaph test can be considered negative with a high level of assurance. The bottom line conclusion is that Prostaph negative results are reliable, while Prostaph positive results may be somewhat less so.

In a few cases, a cow may show positive with culture, and negative with Pro-staph. This can happen for a couple of reasons. A cow which has just been infected with the Staph aureus organism, and has not yet had time to initiate an immune response would show this type of discrepancy. A cow which has Staph aureus organisms present in or on the teat, but has not yet developed an immune system response might also give this type of result.

Is One Of These Methods Better Than The Other?

The differences between culture and Pro-staph results are not presented here with any attempt to prove that one is superior to the other. They are not. Both tests have pros and cons associated with them.

Prostaph is convenient and relatively inexpensive, but may need to be run more than once to ensure the dairyman has the information he needs to make intelligent management decisions.

In addition, Prostaph deals only with the Staph aureus organism, while culture will give indication of any bacterial infection present. Culture is the industry standard, but is difficult, time consuming, and often expensive. Each dairyman in conjunction with his veterinary practitioner, must make his or her own decision on the most appropriate method for the circumstances.

We urge you to contact other states to see what emphasis agriculture education is given. You will find that in all the states surrounding and near Pennsylvania, (see related figures) we now rank last considering state staffing and funding. Is this where you want us to stay? Is this where Pennsylvania, with agriculture being the number one employer in the state, with agriculture providing 20% of the employment in the state, with the agriculture food-processing industry being number one in the nation, with agriculture education covering vital topics you say are important such as water quality, environmental science, forestry, biogenetics to produce food in a more productive way, is this what you meant to do?

We hope not. And we certainly hope you will reconsider your elimination of funding for the FFA-agriculture education. The "future" of agriculture is in your hands.

Ag Day Activities

Gov. Robert Casey along with Boyd Wolff, state ag secretary, samples some of the hundreds of Pennsylvania-produced foods and drinks offered in the Capitol rotunda for Ag Day.

According to the statement, the group "will determine the extent to which agricultural, as well as non-agricultural pollution sources such as onlot sewage systems, residential lawn care, and improperly constructed wells contribute to pollution.

"The pannel will evaluate existing information, make recommendations and suggest funding mechanisms," according to the prepared statement.

Also named to the task force are: Sen. Noah W. Wenger, (R) Lancaster, who is vice chairman of the state Senate Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee; Donald Unangst, state director of ASCS; Glenn Michell, a farmer and associate member of the Perry County conservation district; Archie J. McDonnell, director of the Environmental Resources Research Institute at PSU; George B. Wolff, citizen member of the Chesapeake Bay Commission and a member of the Pennsylvania Conservation Commission; Al Myers, a director of the Pa. Farmers Association; and Ralph Abel, former executive director of the state Fish Commission, and now a member of the Pennsylvania Wildlife Federation.

In other Ag Day activities, Casey also gave his official blessing to the state's revamped agricultural product promotion logo and design.

Although the logo and design were initially announced late last year, and again during the state Farm Show and subsequent activities, Casey's endorsement of the promotional venture gives it the official go-ahead for wide use.

Casey said the logo and design are to be placed on packaging and "will be seen across the nation and the world."

The day's activities were made even more special with the help of Penn's Agri-Women, a lesser-known women's organization that formed in 1977 and is devoted to promoting not only consumption of locally grown produce, but an understanding of where foods actually come from.

For its part in the Agriculture Day celebration, the women's group coordinated efforts to provide two long tables in the capitol rotunda, jammed with a sampling of almost every type of food produced in the state.

While sampling some of the foods, Casey asked as to the location of the business that provided the item.

Along with better-known Pennsylvania foods, such as apples, pears, cheeses, potato chips, and pretzels, there were canned peaches, breads, sliced meats, radishes, tomatoes, grape and fruit juices, pickled foods . . . a large variety of dairy, meat and vegetable foods and drinks.

A large number of representatives from various agriculture organizations also attended the Ag Day celebration, posing with Casey for pictures.

Addison Unites With United

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Members of Addison Milk Producers Cooperative Association Inc. of Addison, N.Y., have recently joined United Dairy Cooperative Services Inc. for assistance in improved marketing of their milk and participating in United's marketwide services.

Addison members will be shipping to Dietrich's Milk Products Inc. plant in Middlebury Center. United has been able to significantly increase the producer pay price above the minimum allowed by the Federal Milk Market Order, the price usually paid the farmers.

Producer price premiums, quality incentives, volume, non-fat solids, and other bonuses, are programs initiated by United to improve dairy farmer's income. These price premiums are combined with the most favorable hauling rates in the area.

United's president Edward D. Anna said, "We are pleased with the confidence exhibited by Addison Cooperative members in joining our growing organization. United Dairy Services is a bargaining cooperative whose main interest is to provide the best opportunities available for marketing our members milk without being burdened with responsibility for plants and equipment that may prove costly to their members. United continues to provide legislative representation, economic and market information, and field services beneficial to all producers throughout the area."

Producers interested in the Addison program may call Bob Nichols, Addison, New York at 607-359-2199 or United at 1-800-289-9595.

Shoop Farms Wins Corn Yield Contest

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Operators of Shoop Farms in Milton, Pennsylvania were state winners in the highly competitive 1989 National Corn Yield Contest, sponsored by the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA).

Shoop Farms won second place in the Pennsylvania no-till non-irrigated division with a yield of 165.49 bushels per acre on the field entered in the contest, which was planted to Northrup King X 6637.

"Shoop Farms' winning yield was excellent, when you consider the average corn yield in the U.S. in 1989 was 116 bushels per acre," said Hiram Christopherson, a Clarkfield, Minnesota farmer who was contest chairman.

A record of 2,783 entries from 46 states vied for top honors in the contest's seven divisions. Shoop Farms were recognized for their achievements at the recent NCGA Corn Classic in Phoenix, Arizona.

The formula for success of more than 400 state and national 1989 Corn Yield Contest winners, including Shoop Farms, can be found in the newly introduced NCGA Corn Yield Guide, published by NCGA and sponsored by the American Cyanamid Company. The guide has been distributed free to all NCGA members and will appear in the mid-March edition of "Farm Journal."

Additional copies of the Corn Yield Guide can be purchased for $5 each, or at discounted rates if 11 or more copies are ordered. Orders and checks should be mailed to NCGA, 1000 Executive Parkway, Suite 105, St. Louis, MO 63141.

Milk Supply Safe

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — "Drink your milk, it's good for you" is a phrase familiar to most of us from childhood. But is it true?

Doubts were first raised in December, when the Wall Street Journal published the results of a survey it had commissioned, which suggested that the American milk supply is contaminated by antibiotic residues. Follow-up tests by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) produced conflicting results.

"It's not surprising that consumers are confused," said Dr. Mark A. Kantor, a food and nutrition specialist with the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service (MCES). "But if they examine all the facts, I think they'll see that there's no cause for alarm."

He explained the situation this way: The Wall Street Journal used a new test method called Charm II to screen samples of milk from 50 supermarkets in 10 cities across the country. Nearly four out of 10 samples (38 percent) tested positive for antibiotics or sulfa drugs.

When FDA scientists used the same test on their own nationwide sample of milk, they got an even higher positive reading for antibiotic contamination -- 51 percent. But when they tested the same samples using more sophisticated techniques, they found no evidence of any drug residues.

This comes as no surprise, said MCES Dairy Production Specialist Dr. James T. Marshall.

"The FDA's testing methods are very specific," he said. "They not only let you know whether or not there are drugs in the milk, but they also tell you exactly which drugs are present. The Charm II test can't do that; it can only identify classes of drugs."

Marshall also thinks caution on the part of farmers and self-regulation by the dairy industry make the risk of drug contamination unlikely.

"Cows, like people, do get sick," Marshall said, "and farmers and veterinarians give them antibiotics just like physicians prescribe antibiotics for sick patients. But most farmers use antibiotics carefully and conscientiously.

"The industry spends millions of dollars to test milk samples," Marshall said: "Milk that tests positive for drug residues never makes it to the processing plant."

But even if some milk with antibiotic residues does slip past the inspection system, that doesn't mean there's a widespread problem in the dairy industry, Kantor said.

"Milk in one carton is a blend of milk from many different cows," he explained. "It's theoretically possible that if even one cow in hundreds or thousands were given antibiotics, trace amounts could show up in some cartons. But that doesn't mean the milk supply is unsafe."

And to ensure that the milk supply remains safe, the FDA plans to step up its regulatory efforts. It is to continue to regularly monitor pasteurized milk and will make sure that individual states use proper, approved testing procedures. Agency personnel are to also conduct educational programs on proper drug usage for farmers.

Consequently, Marshall and Kantor both emphasized that there is no reason for consumers to stop drinking milk.

"It's one of the best sources of calcium, it's an excellent source of protein and it provides a variety of vitamins and other minerals," Kantor said. "Lowfat and skim milk are particularly beneficial because of their reduced fat content."

Marshall added that "the health risks of not drinking milk are far greater than any possible risks encountered by drinking it."

Eastern Milk Producers Pass Budget, Call For Allegiance

WILLIAMSPORT (Lycoming Co.) — Officials with the Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative recently approved a $202.4 million budget for fiscal year 1990-91, which starts April.

Meeting for the first time in its 68 years out of its Syracuse, N.Y., headquarters area, Eastern Milk delegates approved the budget and were told that $1.8 million in profits is targeted for payout premiums in the coming year.

Lewis Gardner, Eastern president, took the helm of his first meeting, and told delegates that the future of dairy farming is not to rely on government allegiance or social understanding. He said that farmers must start learning to better cooperate in order to survive.

"There is great misunderstanding among farmers about cooperatives and their value to all famers," Gardner said.

"The cooperative way of doing business is just plain good business," he said, noting that their is more influence and power to control agricultural destiny for the benefit of all farmers and society within the scope of a cooperative. Members don't lose, as individuals, the opportunity to advance, or the possibility to fail.

However, Gardner said that cooperatives provide the security that allow every farmer the opportunities to stay in business if they have the skills, rather than pitting them against each other and none winning.

He explained that cooperative members fight and pay for legislation that benefits all farmers. He said that farmers who fail to align themselves with a cooperative sap the potenital effectiveness of efforts to influence public agricultural policy.

To further emphasize the need for cooperatives to succeed in the future, executives from two cooperative organizations told delegates that their Capitol Hill representation and alliances are all but gone.

"We no longer have a farm policy in Washington. Nor will we ever have one again," said William Perry, manager of government affairs for the Ohio-based Milk Marketing Inc.

"It's no longer fashionable to be for farmers in the Congress. Nor in the society," he said.

According to Perry, farmers now represent less two percent of the U.S. population and that percentage is steadily decreasing. It is reflected in political representation.

"Of 435 congressmen, 35 percent represent districts with no agriculture; 50 percent represent districts where agriculture is a minor interest, at best," he said.

He predicted that farmers must "put energy, time and money into the fight to seek an equitable farm bill in 1990, or pay the price."

On a similar note, Steve Kerr, executive director for the Council of Northeast Farmer Cooperatives, said that while some state may still be pro-agriculture, Congress in general is not.

Kerr said that a farm bill is needed that will even out the severe flucuations in milk pricing. But Kerr said farmers should forget depending on federal support.

"Much has changed in the agricultural policy environment . . . forget guaranteed rates of return . . . government is not going to provide it," Kerr said. "The market itself is going ot have to provide that return.

"That's the change," he said. "It's a fact of life. We must accept it and deal with it. We can no longer depend on government action, but must instead rely more on our own skills as buisness men and women. And the market; the market will respond."

Holstein Association Issues Opinion

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — Acting on the wishes of the Holstein Association convention delegates, Vice President Carl Butler has given U.S. Congressional testimony on elements to be considered for the 1990 Farm Bill.

Carl Butler

In oral and written statements made before the U.S. House Subcommittee on Livestock, Dairy and Poultry and the U.S. Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry, Butler outlined eleven points related to the new Farm Bill.

In his testimony, Butler said:

"The Holstein Association would like to submit the following eleven elements to affect the 1990 Farm Bill for your consideration.

- "That it be designed to stabilize milk prices.
- "That the provisions of Section 22 of the 1985 Farm Bill be preserved.
- "That it provide for an export enhancement program for live animals.
- "That it increase the minimum legal standards for butterfat, solids-not-fat, and total solids content of milk.
- "That it shift the calculation of CCC purchases from a milk fat basis to a total solids basis.
- That the value of CCC stocks used in Foreign and Domestic Food Assistance Programs be subtracted from the cost of CCC purchases and that the volume of these stocks not be included in calculating surplus or reserve totals used to trigger price support cuts.
- That it include provisions for a standby Supply Management Program.
- That the Supply Management Program be implemented by either excessive production or price support cuts.
- That it limit price support cuts to a maximum of 2 percent of the current price support level in any one calendar year.
- That it include establishing a multiple component pricing system to the producer in all Federal Marketing Orders.
- That it provide for a Dairy Producer Board appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture to administer any Supply Management Program and to supervise the disposal of dairy product reserves.

In his statement, Butler said he believed the provisions would satisfy the restraints of Federal budgetary considerations as well as the American consumers need for a plentiful supply of fresh dairy products at a price they could afford.

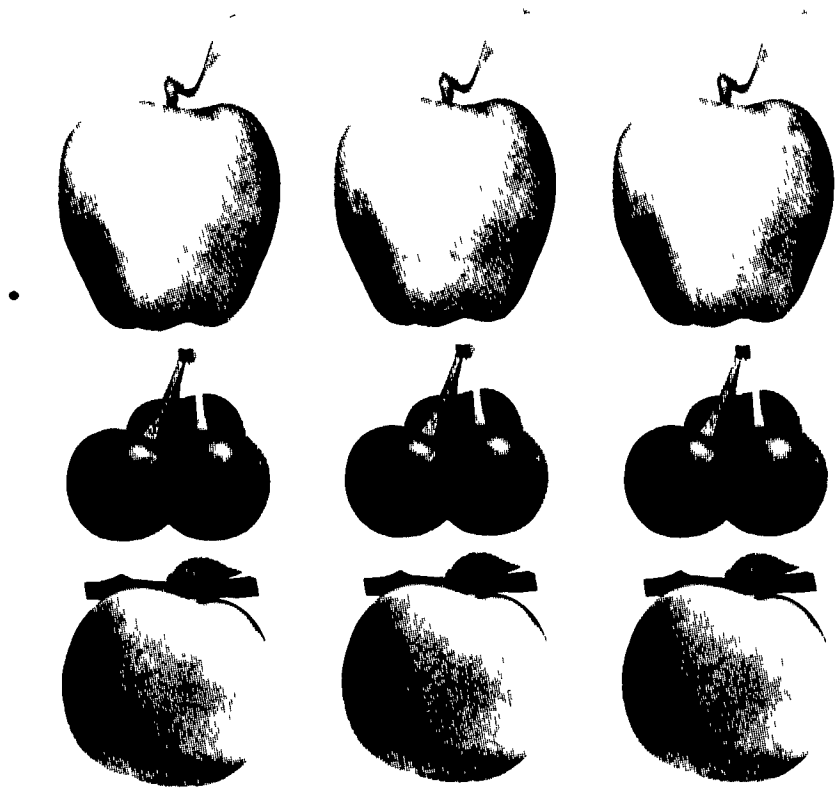
Butler added, the provisions would enable the dairy farmer to maintain a reasonable standard of living for his family.

Vice President Butler made the comments on behalf of the 56,000 members of the Holstein Association who represent about 20,000 U.S. dairy operations.

At its annual meeting June 28, 1989, voting delegates overwhelmingly adopted a resolution endorsing the concept of a dairy farmer controlled supply management program being included in the 1990 Farm Bill.

In developing its positions on the Dairy Title of the 1990 Farm Bill, Butler said, the Association carefully monitored the progress of other organizations as they developed their positions.

"The Holstein Association attempted to add a voice for unity in the dairy industry and to work toward that end," Butler said.



Viking Ship® Calcium Nitrate

15.5-0-0-19Ca

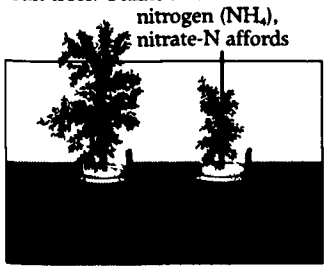
GROWTH

Nitrate nitrogen is the fast-acting, controllable N-source for fruit trees. Unlike ammonium nitrogen (NH_4), nitrate-N affords optimum nutrition timing for rapid growth and early production. Calcium Nitrate supplies 14.5% nitrate nitrogen.



QUALITY

Calcium availability, at adequate levels, is essential to early and sustained production of high-quality tree fruit. Young trees, as well as mature, producing orchards never outgrow their need for calcium.

Specifically, root vigor, reduced fruit disorders, optimum color and size and storage quality of fruit are directly related to adequate calcium levels. With Calcium Nitrate as your orchard fertilizer, trees and soil receive 19% water-soluble calcium.

YIELD

Heavy production of high-quality tree fruit has been achieved—for more than 40 years—by growers using Viking Ship Calcium Nitrate fertilizer.

Use Calcium Nitrate in your fertilizer program. You will be pleased by the predictable response—the growth, quality and yield improvement possible with Calcium Nitrate's combination of essential orchard nutrients. For the life of your trees...Calcium Nitrate...the fertilizer to start with, the fertilizer to stay with!

As with any fertilizer application, consult your extension office or other advisory service for recommended practice that meets local crop and soil conditions.

1989 Farm Credit Report

BALTIMORE, Md. — A strong and expanding farm economy in the mid-Atlantic region and the Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore's focus on marketing and customer service combined to boost the Bank's and affiliated associations' loan volume to over $2.86 billion in 1989, according to year-end financial data released today by the Bank.

The Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore, and its 18 affiliated associations, serving Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Delaware, West Virginia, and Puerto Rico, constitute this region's largest agricultural lender.

Combined, the Bank and its associations recorded 1989 net interest income of $68.0 million on a $2.86 billion loan portfolio, compared to $48.6 million in net interest income on $2.68 billion in loan volume at year-end 1988. The increase in net interest income reflects improved net interest margins.

Net income for 1989 was $25.3 million, down from the $65.0 million level of 1988. However, Bank officials noted that 1988 net income included $59.0 million related to the return of intra-System loss sharing assessments made to the Bank in prior years.

Gene L. Swackhamer, President of the Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore, reported that 1989 net farm income is projected to be a record high $2.2 billion for the area served by the Bank and its associations.

He said evidence of Farm Credit's sharing in farmers' prosperity and success could be seen in the Bank's 6.6 percent increase in loan volume and continued strong credit quality.

We're pleased to see the agricultural economy in this region continuing to expand and individual farmers showing more profits from their operations," said Mr. Swackhamer.

"The fact that our customers are doing well has contributed to our ability to become more successful, and we intend to continue our emphasis on marketing competitive products and services to our member borrowers," he added.

Additional financial information will be available at the Bank's annual stockholders' meeting which is scheduled for March 28-30, 1990, at The Greenbrier in White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia. The Bank's complete financial statement will be distributed in late March.

The Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore and its 18 affiliated associations, which form the Baltimore Farm Credit District, are part of the Farm Credit System. The Farm Credit System is a nationwide system of federally chartered agricultural lending institutions cooperatively owned by their borrowers.

Computer 'Figures In'

called FACS, developed by Griffith Data Services. It gave Zug a freedom and agility with the record-keeping he didn't have before.

"It best suited what I was already doing," he said. "I could change any of the entry columns. I could make any number of different categories I wanted, and that sounded pretty good. I have the program split up between the tractors and the hay equipment, corn equipment and the manure equipment, so I can tell which costs more and what I want to keep operating."

Zug uses the computer to more carefully track costs. FACS helps Zug compare costs of fixing, repairing, and building real-estate structures to his farm. In the summer of 1989, Zug used the computer to analyze the cost of either repairing an old silo or just tearing the silo down and building a new one.

Did calculations

"We did all the calculations and decided it would cost the same amount of money to have that one torn down and a new one built as it would be to try to fix it up. So they tore it down. A man just came with his sledgehammer and they just knocked it down, just like chopping down a big tree."

The computer tracks areas that "cost the most money." Zug analyzes the basic expenses and determines where the money goes — to "real estate repairs, or do we spend more fixing up the building, or did we spend a lot of money last year on fence or did we just buy a lot of small supplies," he said, "or is it livestock equipment we spend too much money, or stable cleaner, or pipeline or silo equipment?" The computer tracks profit and loss for each month and provides information on expenses and income for the year.

But Zug doesn't use all the features in the program, including check writing for expenses. "With the small farm, I didn't think it was necessary that I have check writing. We don't write that many checks each month," he said.

Recently, Zug bought a new computer — an Apple IIGS. The old one was purchased by his daughter, Irene, a secondary math education major at York College of Pennsylvania.

Very happy

"I'm very happy with the Apple system," he said. "That's what I started out with."

Zug was born on a farm in Chester County, about five miles east of West Chester. The farm comprised about 65 acres owned and 335 rented by his grandfather. The Chester County farm was converted to development after 1972, when the Zugs moved out.

At the farm in Peach Bottom, corn and alfalfa are grown for the dairy herd, and oats for the cow feed. Excess corn is used as a cash crop.

Zug was recently presented with the Pennsylvania Young Farmer Award (over-30 category). The award is based on financial record-keeping, crop and livestock production, community service, conservation practices, equipment and farm maintainance, and other factors.

Total picture

"The award is not based on real good corn production, but on the total picture," he said.

The Solanco Young Farmers organization boasts about 70 members. Zug is enthusiastic about the importance of the organization and the monthly meetings to help educate farmers. About 20 to 35 people attend each meeting, which provides information on pesticide licenses, nutritional management, fuels, and other farming information.

Zug enjoys the work on the dairy farm, but is worried about the committment. "I'm committed to the cows. They have to be milked twice a day, every day."

Zug said there is a lot of meetings he would like to attend, and have time to visit people, but "you can't stay very long. You either get there late and leave early or you don't go at all because of the commitment to the cows."

Being outside

But he enjoys being outside, taking care of the animals, and working in the field with the equipment.

"My West Chester friends envy me for being my own boss, having my own responsibility to the cows. But I don't have to punch a time clock.

"On the other hand, they don't envy me at all for the hours I have to work and the amount of money I have to invest in order to stay in business. They say, 'You do all that amount of work for that little amount of money? Why, I wouldn't do that!'"

Ed Zug was recently presented with the Pennsylvania Young Farmer Award (over-30 category). The award is based on financial record-keeping, crop and livestock production, community service, conservation practices, equipment and farm maintainance, and other factors.

Pennsylvania Laboratory Fights SE

Editor's note: Several laboratories have been set up to handle SE diagnostic testing in poultry. One of the laboratories is the Summerdale laboratory near Harrisburg. We've listed other laboratories in the area that also test for SE elsewhere in this issue.

Part 3

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

SUMMERDALE (Cumberland Co.) — Salmonella enteritidis (SE) is not what textbooks describe as "classical food poisoning," where a family goes on a picnic on a hot day, food is unrefrigerated, and everybody gets sick.

Not at all.

SE occurs, among other places and situations, in better restaurants using gourmet sauces containing raw or undercooked eggs, according to several epidemiologists, who study infectious outbreaks of the disease.

"Since SE has become the number one human salmonella isolate in some areas of the country, anyone associated with eggs from production through food preparation should do what they can do minimize the problem," said Dr. Charles Clark, chief of the avian health division of the Bureau of Animal Industry.

Regulatory testing

One of the laboratories supported by the bureau is located in Summerdale, Pennsylvania, near Harrisburg. The division is responsible for the regulatory testing for SE at the flock level.

"We're involved in three categories of testing," said Clark. 'One, if there is an egg-associated human outbreak of SE and it can be traced back to individual poultry flocks, we test those flocks for SE following a set testing protocol. If any flocks are positive, the owner is required to either send the eggs for pasteurization or to send the layers to slaughter."

The second category of testing, according to Clark, is "in breeder flocks to preclude transmission of SE through the hatching eggs. All large commercial hatcheries have been on this testing program since the summer of 1988."

Clark indicated that three types of tests are run on a regular basis. The first involves blood testing on a quarterly basis to check for antibodies to SE. If these tests are positive, the "sero positive" birds are cultured to determine if the birds are actually harboring the bacteria. The second test involves culturing environmental samples for SE also on a quarterly basis. The environmental samples are composed of floor and nest box litter.

Third test

The third test is conducted on a monthly basis on embryonated eggs that die while in the hatching process.

The dead embryos are cultured for the presence of SE. If the breeder flock is determined to be infected by this testing protocol, the flock is sent to slaughter.

"The third category of testing is a voluntary Pennsylvania program set up to test pullets before they are placed in production," Clark said. 'Participants in this program are required to place only test-negative pullets to remain in the program."

In addition to the testing conducted for regulatory purposes, said Clark, the poultry industry is also "self-testing their flocks and handling their flocks accordingly."

Loses flock

"It's very expensive when someone loses their flock," Clark said. "Of course it's readily apparent that if they destroy the flock, then they've lost a lot of money." The final loss depends at what stage of production the flock is in. "Although it depends on the size of the flock and the stage of production, the value often approaches $225,000."

Last month, a mandatory control program was instituted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to control the spread of SE in table-egg poultry flocks in the United States. All breeders — including commercial and smaller "backyard" flocks — must comply with a testing program for SE.

The control program will address the problem by testing and certification of the primary and multiplier breeding flocks that produce the table-egg layers, and tracebacks and testing of commercial table-egg layer flocks if and when they are implicated in human infection with SE, according to the USDA.

But how will this affect local farmers? Lancaster has a large amount of flocks — about 500 of the more than 800 commercial layer flocks (each flock ranges from 60,000-80,000 hens) in the state — in fact, the highest number of layers of any county in the U.S. "To the commercial layer operations and the large egg-type hatcheries, there will be no difference since the program is essentially the same as presently being carried out in Pennsylvania," Clark said. "However, small hatcheries producing egg-type chicks may have a difficult time complying with the testing protcols and other aspects of the regulations."

Stringent procedures

"It's going to be interesting to see how the control program is implemented because the testing procedures are very stringent," said Clark.

"It is impossible to completely remove SE from the environment, since SE is not confined to the chickens," said Clark. "However, the tests that we've performed, according to the program, show that breeder flocks are clean."

The department also tests breeder flocks for mycoplasma, pullorum disease, and avian influenza.

The large hatcheries also have their own laboratories and do their own quality testing, said Clark. "We're in constant contact with the industry," he said.

14 outbreaks

In 1989, there were 14 outbreaks of SE (both meat and egg-related) in Pennsylvania alone, according to Dr. Dale Tavers, director of the division of acute infectious disease epidemiology in the department of health.

"An outbreak is usually a cluster of human illnesses attributed to eating in one establishment," Clark said. "Then the state health department comes in and tries to determine where it came from." If they prove the disease is related to egg infection, then the source of the eggs is traced and the implicated flock is tested.

Clark said that most human outbreaks are the result of eating raw egg in combination with mishandling of the egg or the egg product.

Several outbreaks have occurred from eating chocolate mousse, bearnaise sauce, and Caesar salad (all made using raw eggs).

Familiar to people

"The egg is so familiar to people that they're not accustomed to treating it as a raw product," Clark said. "Some people do not treat the egg as a perishable animal product requiring strict attention to refrigeration.

"Because of this, improper refrigeration can occur which allows SE, if present, to multiply to sufficient levels in the egg to cause human illness unless thoroughly cooked. Human outbreaks occur when these mishandled eggs are used in foods raw or in foods that are cooked at lower temperatures than is necessary to kill the bacteria," he said.

The FDA does not consider the egg a perishable product. Eggs, especially during the summer, are

Salmonella — Basic Answers To Everyone's Questions

1. Is Salmonella new? No. Salmonella bacteria was isolated in 1885 by Dr. A.E. Salmon, after whom the bacteria is named.

2. Is the level of Salmonella contamination increasing? No. According to a United States Department of Agriculture study, the national incidence of Salmonella in chicken has not changed significantly over the last 20 years.

3. What is Salmonella? Salmonella is a general name for nearly 2,000 closely related bacteria. It can be found in many raw foods including red meat, seafood, poultry, and unpasteurized milk. It also can be found on the skin of humans and in their intestinal tract. The bacteria cannot be seen by the naked eye.

4. What is Salmonellosis? Pronounced Sal-mon-ell-o-sis, it is the illness caused by ingesting Salmonella bacteria. Symptoms include nausea, headaches, vomiting, and diarrhea.

5. Will properly cooked poultry contain Salmonella bacteria? No. Temperatures above 140°F kill the bacteria. Since poultry is recommended to be cooked at a minimum of 160°F, all Salmonella bacteria will be destroyed.

6. Is poultry the main cause of Salmonella outbreaks? No. Although the USDA reports that beef has a lower incidence of Salmonella contamination, the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Georgia, indicates that beef is responsible for 2 to 3 times the number of Salmonellosis outbreaks than chicken.

7. Can Salmonella be eliminated in commercial food production? Most likely not. At a 1984 International Symposium on Salmonella, a group of world-renowned scientists stated that "... the eradication of Salmonella in domestic animals is not attainable at this time," and that, "... contamination levels cannot be expected to change greatly in the future."

So... What Can Be Done With Poultry Products In The Home?

Boneless poultry should be cooked to an internal temperature of no less than 160°F, whole poultry and bone-in parts until the meat reaches no less than 180°F. When poultry is cooked properly, all juices will be clear, not pink.

Remember to wash hands, utensils, cutting boards and counter tops after handling raw poultry and before handling other food. This reduces the potential for other contamination if the Salmonella bacteria is present.

Store cooked poultry between 160°F and 212°F or in the refrigerator. Never leave cooked poultry uncovered and at room temperature for more than two hours. And remember, always defrost poultry in the refrigerator.

Safe food-handling practices will help increase your enjoyment of a nutritious product.

Poultry diagnostic services

Small flock owners often overlook the value to flock health programs that is gained by having a diagnostic laboratory examination of sick and dead birds. Addresses and telephone numbers are provided here for your convenience. It is especially important that flock owners report large or other unusual death losses to a diagnostic laboratory.

Laboratory personnel may need information about the flock and materials to use in the examination. A recommended practice is to phone ahead for directions, the hours of operation, and advice about the number and condition of the birds needed for laboratory diagnosis.

stored in humid and hot warehouses, where SE, if present, can easily grow. However, Clark is undertaking a study of the U.S. military, which customarily handles the egg as a perishable product.

"The military, which has strict refrigeration and handling guidelines for eggs used in their dining halls, does not have a problem with food-related illness outbreaks associated with eggs in spite of a six-month shelf life," said Clark. "Their experience demonstrates the effectiveness of treating the egg as an animal product rather than a sterile food item.

"Since most SE outbreaks occur in the summertime, a major cause of human SE is the result of temperature abuse of the suspect egg," said Clark. "SE is something in the handling of the eggs."

Belgian Blue Cattle: Fast Growth, Low-Fat Meat

MAHWAH, N.J. — A new breed of beef cattle, the Belgian Blue, features the potential for fast, efficient growth and low-fat, low-cholesterol meat.

"The Belgian Blue was brought into New Jersey for the State Prison Farm System," said Pete Reilly, a representative of Belgian Blue Breeders U.S.A., which will market the cattle.

The company imported pregnant recipients from Canada with the first pure Belgian Blue born east of the Mississippi on Thanksgiving of 1988 — Pilgrim Dawn, according to Reilly.

Belgian Blue Breeders has a four-month-old bull, weighing 530 pounds, being collected at Dependabull in Verona, New York. According to Reilly, three more pregnant recipients are due in May and June this year, along with 35 Belgian Blue/Holstein crosses.

Several months ago Belgian Blue Breeders butchered a 13-month-old cross. Live weight was 1,290 pounds and carcass weight was 795 pounds. Retail cuts amounted to 600 pounds — approximately a 77 percent yield, according to Reilly. Waste amounted to less than 10 percent. "The carcass was actually less than yield grade 1," said Reilly.

"We intend to raise the beef to market, geared to the health-conscious consumer who wants good taste and low fat and low cholesterol with outstanding flavor and tenderness," said Reilly.

Belgian Blue Breeders will soon be taking their first veal calf to slaughter. At 90 days old, the calf weighed 390 pounds. The company expects the yield to be significantly higher than the norm.

"Due to the muscle makeup of the Belgian, the meat is extremely tender and juicy," said Reilly. "The taste is excellent."

For more information, contact Belgian Blue Breeders U.S.A., P.O. Box 513, Mahwah, NJ 07430, (201) 529-2500.

Pa. Begins First Dairy Nutrition Service

BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin Co. Correspondent

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Pennsylvania's first dairy nutrition service (DNS) recently got under way in Franklin County. The service, run by a board of directors, employs an independent dairy nutrition consultant with no ties to any local, regional, or national feed concern.

Dean Snowberger of St. Thomas, the nutrition consultant, started providing his services to Franklin County dairymen on December 1, 1989. Snowberger visits participating farmers once a month and takes a forage sample. The sample is sent to Agri-Analysis in Lancaster County, which sends the results to Snowberger's computer. Snowberger then balances the herd's rations from the test results.

Besides forage sampling, Snowberger also formulates rations for all dairy animals on the farm, does herd profiles, evaluates feeding practices, monitors heifer growth, advises the farmer on the best feed buys, analyzes herd efficiency factors, evaluates herd management practices, troubleshoots existing problems, and determines needed action. He is also available by telephone for ration updates and consultation.

When a farmer signs up for the service, he pays a $100 start-up fee, regardless of herd size. The monthly fee is $1.25 per mature cow, whether milking or dry. There is no separate fee for heifers. The farmer pays the laboratory's fee for forage sampling. Members pay into the organization for Snowberger's services.

Geared To Needs

The program is geared to each individual farmer's needs. Some farmers want maximum production from their cows, while others want to feed their cows for the least possible cost, according to officers of the group.

While nutritional consulting services are readily available from many feed companies, Franklin County's DNS is unique in that the consultant is not selling anything but his services.

Don Wengert of Shippensburg, treasurer of DNS, said, "He's working for me, not for a feed company."

Mark Burkholder, secretary of the group, noted that a representative of one of the large feed companies visited him once every six months. "That wasn't often enough," he said.

Buying Products

"We're still buying the feed company's products," Wayne Kuhns, president of DNS, said.

With Snowberger's feeding recommendations in hand, the farmer purchases the ingredients needed for the ration from various feed companies to get the best price.

"It's more cost-effective this way," according to Kuhns. A commercial pre-mix is composed of many ingredients. "We can buy the ingredients and put it together for about half the price."

Snowberger currently balances rations for about 1,300 cows in 15 herds.

Patterned After CMA

The program is patterned after the Crop Management Association (CMA), which in turn had its roots in the Tennessee Valley Authority, which ran a demonstration project in Franklin County from 1975-1980. Through the program, local farmers had access to university experts who helped them work on crop management and nutrition. Farmers were advised on how to raise better crops, balance their animals' rations, and feed their animals properly.

"We lost these services when the TVA program ended," said Bill Swailes of Willow Hill, vice-president of DNS. "We missed those services, so the CMA was started in 1982. CMA and DNS are more intensive than the Tennessee Valley Authority program was."

Officers of Franklin County's new Dairy Nutrition Service are, front, Mark Burkholder, secretary; Wayne Kuhns, president; back, Bill Swailes, vice president; and Don Wengert, treasurer.

While DNS is independent of the Penn State Cooperative Extension office, they have a "trading relationship" according to Swailes.

"The extension agents can't get out to the farms much any more," he explained. "They need eyes and legs, which we provide, and they help us in return."

Watches Closely

He noted that Phil Wagner, Franklin County extension agent for dairy, has been very supportive of the program. Pennsylvania State University also watches the new program closely.

According to Wengert, independent dairy nutrition consultants are becoming more common in other areas of the country. These consultants are self-employed, however, while Snowberger works under the direction of a nine-member board composed of dairy farmers. It is this "association concept" that is unusual, Swailes said.

"The independents can pick and choose who they want for their customers," Wengert said.

Dairylea Supports NY Milkfat Standard Reduction

SYRACUSE, NY — Citing that the current New York State minimum milkfat content regulation hinders the free flow of milk in interstate commerce, Dairylea Cooperative Inc. has voiced its support of a proposal that would bring New York in alignment with the rest of the Northeast.

The minimum milkfat content of whole milk required by current New York State regulations is 3.4 percent. The standard established by all other states in the region is 3.25 percent. The New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets has proposed reducing the New York State standard to bring it in line with the region.

Dairylea's support of this measure is in accord with resolutions adopted by its delegate body.

Testifying before the State Department of Agriculture and Markets on Feb. 27 in Albany, NY, Ellen LaBerge, corporate counsel for Dairylea, said the Cooperative has long advocated the passage or adoption of legislation that will better align the Northeast milkshed.

In 1987, when the Legislature amended New York's Milk Control Law, it authorized and directed the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets to act to achieve uniformity of laws and regulations involving standards for dairy products.

The Commissioner was further charged with working toward the elimination of unnecessary and costly barriers to the free flow of milk and milk products created by laws and regulations originally enacted to help the income of dairy farmers.

However, the present effect of these regulations interferes with the free flow of milk and reduces the efficiency of distribution.

Changing the standard of identity for whole milk to reduce the minimum milkfat content to 3.25 percent would eliminate one such barrier, said LaBerge.

"The present minimum milkfat requirement was originally supposed to assist in the marketing of milkfat. Given the 'fat consciousness' of today's consumers, plus the recognized, urgent need to facilitate and encourage regional milk marketing, the requirement has outlived its usefulness," said LaBerge.

Dairylea, agrees with the department's assessment that the entire dairy industry, as well as consumers, will benefit from this change.

In addition, LaBerge said that Dairylea is hopeful that this change will lead the way toward easing other interstate regulatory differences, such as those existing in the sanitary inspection and product labeling requirements in the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic regions, now operating to the detriment of New York State's dairy industry.

New York Bull Test Results Are In

ITHACA, N.Y. — The data for the third weigh period of the 1989-90 NY Bull Test have been released. The 99 beef bulls have completed 84 days of the 140-day test at the Cornell Teaching and Research Center in Harford, N.Y.

William Greene, test director, said the bulls are doing well and he is urging bull test consignors to begin contacting potential buyers.

"The cattle market has been fairly good and somewhat stable and the true value of a performance tested bull from the N.Y. Bull Test is becoming more evident," he said. "Each year we see the quality of animals improving at New York feeder cattle sales. Many of these calves are sired by performance tested bulls from the N.Y. Bull Test Sale."

The 99 bulls' average daily gain (ADG) for the 3rd weigh period was 3.59 lbs. which resulted in a cumulative daily gain of 4.15 lbs. The weight per day of age (WPDA) for all bulls so far is 3.18 lbs. Fifty-nine breeders in six states have consigned the 99 bulls from nine beef breeds.

Top gaining honors for this weigh period go to a Shorthorn (Test #95001) consigned by Ashwood Farm, Castle Creek, NY. This son of Alexander had a 3rd period ADC of 5.50 lbs. for a cumulative ADG of 5.36 lbs. and a WPDA of 3.72 lbs. The 10 Shorthorn bulls from seven breeders have averaged 3.66 lbs. this period, with a cumulative ADG of 4.31 lbs. and a WPDA of 3.21 lbs.

The second highest gaining bull is a Simmental (#95076) sired by Papillon. This consignment from Shoemaker's Simmentals, Mann's Choice, Pa., has a 3rd weigh ADG of 5.14 lbs., a cumulative test ADG of 4.69 lbs. and a WPDA of 3.23 lbs.

The number three gaining bull is also a Simmental (#95066) consigned by Allegro Farms, Frewsburg, NY. This son of Wheatley Tradition has a period ADG of 5.07 lbs. for a cumulative ADG of 4.76 lbs., and a WPDA of 3.79 lbs. The 20 Simmental bulls representing 12 consignors have an average 3rd period ADG of 3.61 lbs. for a cumulative gain of 4.11 lbs. and a WPDA of 3.34 lbs.

Thirty Angus bulls consigned by 13 breeders have a 3.46 lbs. ADG, a cumulative average of 4.26 lbs. and a WPDA of 3.15 lbs.

The twenty-eight bulls from fifteen Polled Hereford breeders averaged 3.71 lbs. this period for a cumulative ADG of 4.00 lbs. and a WPDA of 3.09 lbs.

The six Charolais, from four consignors, gained 3.57 lbs. this period, and have a cumulative ADG of 4.32 lbs. and a WPDA of 3.30 lbs.

Two Horned Herefords gained 3.68 lbs. for a cumulative gain of 3.79 lbs. and a WPDA of 2.94 lbs. One Chianina had a 3.71 lbs. ADG, a 3.94 lb. cumulative and a WPDA of 3.20 lbs. The lone Gelbvieh had an ADG of 3.21 lbs., a cumulative of 4.37 lbs. and a WPDA of 3.33 lbs. The single Red Angus gained 2.79 lbs. this period for a cumulative ADG of 4.12 lbs. and a WPDA of 3.25 lbs.

Approximately 55 of these 99 bulls will sell at the New York Bull Test Sale at 7:00 p.m., Friday, May 4. The sale is in the Livestock Pavilion on the Cornell University Campus, Ithaca, NY.

The test is sponsored by Cooperative Extension, Animal Science Dept. at Cornell, the NY Beef Cattlemen's Assoc., and NYS Dept. of Ag & Markets.

Mr. Greene has also indicated that there is a great deal of interest in the 1989-90 NY Bull Test consignments. Potential buyers or other interested people are invited to view the bulls.

The next weigh dates are March 20 and April 17. For more information please call Bill Greene at 607-255-2856, or write to 130 Morrison Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y. 14853.

Mifflin County Rotary Invited Farmers

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

LEWISTOWN (Mifflin Co.) — In the spirit of fellowship, the Lewistown Rotary Club invited farmers and agribusiness leaders to its 1990 Rural-Urban Day at the Green Gables Arena on Tuesday, March 6. More than 40 farmers responded by attending the dinner as guests.

Guest speaker for this annual event was John Showers, the Governor's Advisor on Rural Affairs. In this role, he described himself as "the eyes and ears of the governor," one who gets out and around the state "to recognize special problems, opportunities, and concerns in rural Pennsylvania."

Because his position has senior staff status, John Showers reports directly to Governor Casey. Showers said he is pleased that Pa. now has someone in the Governor's office working on rural issues which in turn adds to the success of programs implemented by the state.

But why the emphasis on rural?

Rural communities seek the same "benefits, programs and attention urban areas get," Showers said.

Rural areas share the same problems as their urban counterparts such as transportation problems, housing problems, and unemployment, but the impact is different because of geography and isolation.

Implementing programs and delivering services also becomes more expensive because of the larger area to be covered, he said.

Just how rural is Pennsylvania?

Showers states that, surprisingly, "Pennsylvania has the largest rural population (3.6 million people) of any state in the union ... and that 70 percent of the land mass is rural."

Although there are different definitions of rural, Showers said he chooses to define rural as "an area not dominated by a large city politics or a large city administration."

Defining rural is one thing, but policymakers in Harrisburg need a description of Pennsylvania's rural area. Showers explained that there are actually two rural areas; the rural counties in western Pennsylvania which Showers says "have never really recovered from the last recession," and the eastern rural counties who show rapid growth and development, and low unemployment.

To further describe rural, John Showers said that 4 percent of the rural sector is in agriculture. Traditionally, the terms rural and agricultural were synonymous. But now other industries like mining, timbering, oil, and gas come into play.

Since agriculture is not the only aspect of rural, Showers said he sees the need to split farm-oriented programs from programs aimed at rural development.

Legislation has been introduced at the federal level for this purpose, and the state also recognizes the benefits.

Showers said he hopes to achieve strong agricultural policies as well as strong policies for community and economic development. Although separate policies help to target specific areas, the link between farming and rural economic development is critical.

Because 52 percent of the farm income is derived off the farm, Showers emphasizes the need to find other ways to improve the rural economy to keep agriculture strong.

Politically, difficulty arises in finding "a rural consensus," a policy all sectors, diverse as they are, can agree on. But he said progress is being made.

"For the first time in history, all four caucus's (Republican, Democrat, House and Senate) have come together" and have established the Center for Rural Pennsylvania, Showers said. This Center recently announced its $8 million "Roots" program that funnels monies to rural communities.

Gov. Casey, in the last four years, has addressed broad issues aimed at the entire state. Over the next year, Shower's Office of Rural Affairs, established in March of 1989 to serve as a direct link to rural PA, plans to prioritize within this broad spectrum.

Showers said that Pennsylvania has "a Governor that recognizes the strength and vitality of our rural communities ... as well as their unique qualities."

Showers also complimented Rotary for sponsoring Rural-Urban Days, and the attending farmers for bridging the gap and for encouraging dialogue between the rural and urban sectors in order to build and grow together.

When Farmers Prosper, So Do Related Businesses

BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin Co. Correspondent

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — At least two Franklin County businessmen whose livelihoods depend upon farmers are optimistic about the condition of local agriculture.

"Things have bottomed out," said Jeff Stouffer, co-owner of Stouffer Brothers Farm Equipment in Chambersburg. Barring anything unforeseen, such as a repeat of the drought of 1988, "I look for the farm economy to do better in the 1990s," he said.

Stouffer, who deals in new and used equipment, expects his business to improve in 1990.

"For a long time, farming wasn't a growing industry. Farmers are getting more income now than in the past decade, and I see them getting more unless something unforeseen happens," he said. "[Farming] will probably go up and down some, but it's still the major industry in the county."

The past year was "fair" for his business, Stouffer said. "Some things moved and others didn't. There's been a change in what sells well. Harvesters have not sold well.

"Our main customer is the dairy farmer, and he is still digging out from buying feed. He's either buying used equipment or making do with the machinery he already owns.

"When farm income did not warrant the purchase of a big tractor, people kept repairing their large equipment," he explained.

In general, Stouffer said, the equipment that will pay for itself will sell, such as no-till equipment and feeder mixers.

One trend Stouffer has noted is an increase in the number of small farms. The expected emergence of huge, commercial farms has not materialized.

Many owners of "farmettes" have another, off-farm income. "We sell the smaller equipment to them," Stouffer said.

Another businessman with a positive outlook for the 1990s is William Snider of Snider's Elevator, Inc. "Overall, the farmer is more satisfied with his operation since the fall of 1989," Snider said.

"Before the fall of 1989, things were at a standstill," he continued. "As the corn came in, things looked better. People are satisfied, even though they had poor quality forages." Forages were abundant because of adequate rainfall, but the quality was much lower than in 1988.

"We had a real good year," Snider said regarding 1989. "We were drying corn 24 hours a day, seven days a week."

According to Snider, Franklin County is currently a corn-deficient area, even with the recent good corn crop. Snider stores barley, wheat, oats, and shelled corn for farmers at his elevators in Williamson and Lemasters. The elevator delivers the grain to the farmer at scheduled intervals.

Even though the local corn harvest was good, Snider has to buy one or two tractor-trailer loads of corn from Ohio per week.

This corn is sold to local farmers who do not grow their own corn or who do not have sufficient supplies.

"We do this [purchase corn] to balance our grain books," Snider explained. "We can't sell all our stored corn. We have to keep our grain books balanced just like a bank does."

Snider said that the corn he purchases now from Ohio, is "fairly cheap, but the price could go up in June. It can't go much lower."

Local farmers are smiling, Snider said, because of the high price they are receiving for their milk. Of the overall local farm picture, Snider said, "If we have good grain and hay crops in 1990 and grain prices stay where they are, and if hogs sell for 50 or 55 cents a pound, things will look pretty decent."

An employee of Greencastle Livestock Market, where many local farmers sell steers and hogs to meat packers, said prices for animals currently are good.

Alternative To Price Cut

three main elements: a means of adjusting the support price, a "Component Adjustment Program" for dealing with excesses of components such as butterfat and standby authority for overall production controls, according to Dan Lauers, the group's legislative representative.

Rather than allowing the support price to continue to decline, as is likely under the administration's plan, the federation proposal would establish a floor of $10.60 a hundredweight, 50 cents above the current support for milk of average butterfat content. Above that floor, the support price would be adjusted annually to reflect half of any change in the average price paid to farmers across the country in the past year. If, for instance, this average all-milk price declined 50 cents compared to the same period two years ago, the support price would drop 25 cents.

"It (the support price) can go up or down, but it can't go below $10.60," Lauers said.

The innovative element of the federation's proposal is the so-called CAP designed to deal with the current imbalance between supplies of butterfat and those of the other milk components. Surplus of just one product, butter, was largely responsible for the 50-cent support price reduction in January, which was based on a U.S. Department of Agriculture forecast of 8 billion pounds too much milk in 1990. The forecast is misleading in the sense that almost all of the nonfat solids from this milk are being sold commercially.

"If we've got too much butterfat, we've got to cut the price," Lauers said.

However, rather than cutting the price of milk in general, the federation's proposal seeks to reduce the price farmers are paid just for the butterfat portion. Under CAP, farmers would be allocated a historical base for butterfat production. In certain situations, farmers selling more fat than their bases would receive a lower price (or have funds deducted -- the two things are equivalent) on that portion in excess of the base.

The deduction presumably would allow the government to sell butter on the world market at competitive prices that are much lower than the domestic level. Although the numbers are not yet cast in stone, Lauers said, preliminary estimates assume the deduction would amount to about 75 cents a pound. On a hundredweight basis, that would translate into a reduction of $2.75 for producers in the Mid-Atlantic area, according to Jim Fraher, an economist for Atlantic Dairy Cooperative.

CAP is essentially a quota program for butterfat. It would be triggered by a projection that surplus butterfat production in the coming year will exceed six percent of total production. The reduction in historical base would then become the difference between the projected surplus level and six percent, Fraher noted. Thus, a seven-percent surplus would mean reductions on only one percent of total marketings, assuming farmers hold their production level.

National Milk's plan also anticipates the possibility that milk production in general could exceed use by more than six percent. In this case, USDA would be required to implement some form of inventory management: a two-tiered pricing, or quota, scheme; another whole herd buyout program; or another milk diversion program. Federation analysts project such management will be needed at least once during the course of a five-year farm bill.

Steve Kerr, the executive director of the Northeast Council of Farmer Cooperatives, said the federation's plan reflects the fact that its members are divided on the price cut-supply control issue. Only a minority favor a continuation of current policy, he said, but the rest cannot agree on the alternative to price cuts.

There probably is at least a majority consensus for some type of whole herd buyout program. Unfortunately, Kerr said, that alternative is diminished by adamant opposition from the influential cattle lobby.

On that issue, he added, "Cattlemen are exercising a veto power over the dairy industry in this country."

Farm Organizations Object To Stopping Class I Milk Support

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

Three farm organizations this week have issued statements opposing the removal of a $1.05 per hundredweight state price support for drinking milk.

The Pennsylvania State Grange, the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, and the Pennsylvania Farmers Union all report having representatives testify before the state Milk Marketing Board to continue the Class I price differential for a least a year.

Seemingly at root of the call for the extension of the price support is the increased cost to produce milk and the projected sharp decline in current prices paid for milk.

The $1.05 per hundredweight over-order differential was added on to milk prices September to help dairymen who were suffering greatly increased feed costs due to the 1988 drought and the 1989 rains. The differential is to begin phase-out May 31.

All three organizations agree that the support should continue, but do not agree for how long.

Melvin Eckhaus, PFA commodity director to the PMMB, on Wednesday said that the farmers association recommends an extension of the over-order price until May 31, 1991, "to give dairymen a return for their management and equity capital," according to a PFA statement.

Grange dairy chairman Robert Pardoe Sr. did not set an extension deadline, but in testimony spoke in support of continuing the support.

PFU representatives also did not provide a timetable for removing the $1.05 differential, but gave similar reasons for its continuance. The PFU did, however, suggest an additional support price of $1 per hundredweight for fluid milk during May, June, July and August and 75 cents per hundredweight during September, October, November and December.

"We have enjoyed a reasonable price for milk for the past few months," Grange spokesman Pardoe said. "But our milk price is now dropping rapidly. Hay prices . . . remain high and other costs have increased, such as fuel prices and equipment repair and replacement," he said.

According to Grange officials, dairymen are losing purchasing power on the farm as milk prices start to drop.

Parity, a measure of purchasing power in comparison to other components of society, shows that dairymen are receiving "only 55 percent of parity. Parity price of milk, at last report, is $25.70," according to a news release.

"The widely fluctuating (Minnesota-Wisconsin) price series sets the price of Class I milk in Pennsylvania even though those fluctuations have little to do with our Class I market," Pardoe said.

"We suggest the PMMB set a Class I price in Pennsylvania regardless of the M-W series. Our farm price would still vary, but not as drastically as our current system," he said.

PFA representative Eckhaus said that dairymen had already testified to the PMMB that their profit margins are not high enough to enable them to replace necessary machinery and equipment.

Eckhaus said he based his one-year extension recommendation on a management return of five-percent of gross sales and six-percent interest on equity. He said that means dairymen in Pennsylvania received 1989 prices at least $1.82 below production costs if management and equity are included.

Additionally, Eckhaus said the effect of weather continue.

"Pennsylvania dairy production is still 7.5 percent lower than it was in January 1989 and eight percent lower than in February 1989," he said. "Both the numbers of cows and production per cow are significantly lower. In fact, of all the major dairy producing states, Pennsylvania is the slowest to recover from the adverse weather," Eckhaus said.

According to PFU spokesman Arden Tewksbury, the over-order price must continue because of poor weather and poor quality, but high priced, roughage farmers have to feed and the price of supplemental feed required to provide balanced diets for their herds.

Tewksbury also told the board that the last year's inordinately wet weather created more than poor hay quality. He said a number of fields were put out of condition physically ("rutted up") and will require plowing; an additional expense.

Bob Junk, president of the Fayette County chapter, told the PMMB that farmers he represents in the southwestern portion of the state will require a continued over-order price until the end of the year.

According to PFU calculations, if existing premiums are lost, the average dairy farmer will get about $3,000 less in gross receipts in June than they did in January.

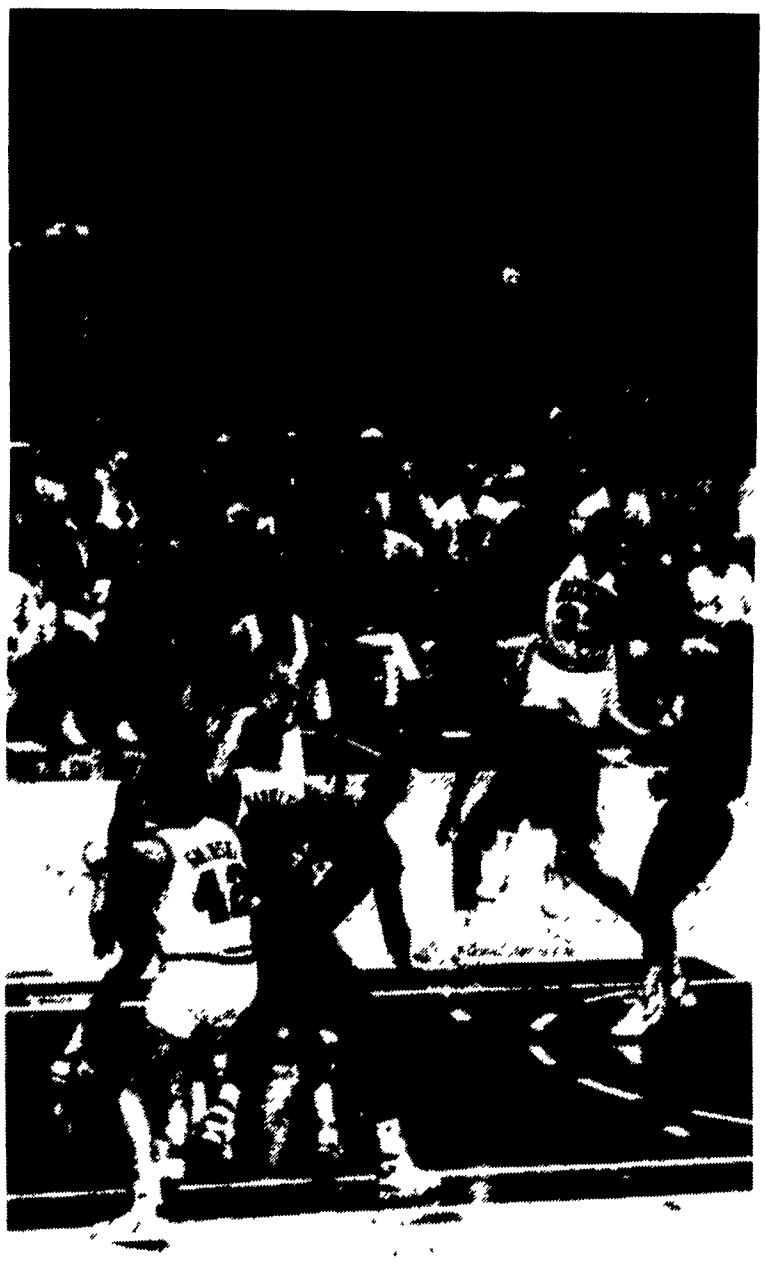
Promotes milk At 76ers Game



PHILADELPHIA—The 76ers won the basketball game here Wednesday night, and the dairy farmers had their favorite product, MILK, promoted to the Spectrum fans. In the "I Love Milk" promotion, all fans 14 years old and under, received a nylon fanny-pack bearing the message, "Milk. It Does A Body Good."

Ann Marie Mitchell, state dairy princess, led the way for the dairy farmers and Hersey Hawkins scored 12 of his 25 points in the third quarter to lead the scoring for the home team against the Miami Heat. The 76ers won the game 118-97. And the dairy farmers continue to win everytime the milk promotion give-aways are used by the young fans.

In the photo, Editor Newswanger, used a 70mm to 230 telephoto lense to catch Hawkins (No. 33) in action.

White Oak Mills Plan Role In Pork Quality

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — White Oak Mills will be among the first hog production companies in the nation to implement the National Pork Producer's management education program to assure the consumer safe, residue-free pork.

Leaders of five large pork production companies met in Chicago on February 13, 1990 to outline their plans for participation in the Pork Quality Assurance Program, a program developed by the National Pork Producer's Council.

The purpose of the program is to provide management education and self certification for all pork producers to avoid drug residues and assure that they are producing a safe product.

White Oak Mills feels strongly about the importance of doing everything possible to assure that the final pork product is a safe and top-quality product.

The program consists of three levels of management education and certification. Mike Miller is currently developing plans to implement the program at White Oak Mills.

White Oak Mills hopes other producers follow our lead in the Pork Quality Assurance Program. Widespread participation in the program will benefit the entire pork industry by protecting or even expanding the market for pork.

Weiss Joins Farmland Trust

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster Farmland Trust, the non-profit farmland preservation group, announced today that Karen M. Weiss will be joining its staff to fill the organization's new Land Conservancy position. Made possible through a grant from the William Penn Foundation in Philadelphia, the position will involve meeting with land owners to work on agricultural land preservation goals, assisting with negotiations involving creative conservation land acquisitions, and maintaining the Trust's Farmland Registry, a registry of conservation oriented buyers and sellers of productive Lancaster County farms.

Lancaster Farmland Trust president, Dan Herr, sees the hiring as "a way for the Trust to deal with the increasing number of requests from farmers interested in preservation options. We're pleased to have Karen join our efforts to preserve Lancaster County's treasured farmland."

Ms. Weiss has extensive experience in the farmland preservation field. She has served as the Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board's Farmland Preservation Specialist since November, 1986, and she administered the County's easement program during her tenure as the Board's Acting Director in May, 1988-1989. A graduate of West Chester University, Ms. Weiss recently completed the 1989 Management Training Program for Nature Conservation & Historical Preservation Organizations conducted by LaSalle University's Non-Profit Management Development Center, School of Business Administration.

The Lancaster Farmland Trust is a membership-supported, privately funded, non-profit organization working to preserve Lancaster County's farmland before it is lost forever. The Trust is located at 128 East Marion Street, Lancaster, 17602. For further information, please call (717) 293-0707.

Day Care Offers A Home Away From Home

HOME AWAY FROM HOME
Mary Laeger-Hagemeister
Dauphin Co. Correspondent

MILLERSBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Her work day starts early, 7:00 a.m., and doesn't end until 6:30 p.m. There are no coffee breaks, no lunch breaks, and minimal contact with other adults. But for Sandy Altland of Millersburg, it's still rewarding. Sandy is a registered home day-care provider. "You have to like kids" is Sandy's response to people who ask her why she operates such a business.

From the smiles on the children's faces and the hugs and kisses lavished on Sandy so freely from her "active bunch" it's evident that the children in Sandy's care feel her genuine love and concern for them.

The Start Of A Home Day Care

"It all started when my own children were two and four, now twelve and fourteen. We needed extra money so I got an outside job. But finding quality child care was difficult and I really enjoy being home so I decided to start doing day care in my home."

It was the best of both worlds. Sandy was able to contribute to the family budget while being at home with her own children. "Since there were no other young children in our neighborhood it also gave my children playmates."

As her children have gotten older there are more frustrations. When they come home from school, they are in competition for their mother's attention. To assure her own children's privacy, the day care children are not allowed to play in Erin's and Keith's bedrooms.

Twelve-year-old Keith is idolized by the day care boys. When he walks in the room, they kids clamor around him. Keith's response to mom's home business is: "Sometimes it's a pain, but most of the time I like it. I like my mom being home and I like playing with the kids."

Of course with the benefits of having a home-based business are the disadvantages. "There is no separation of work life and home life. That's stressful sometimes. If I wait until the last child leaves at 6:30 to start dinner it would be very late for my family. I try to remain professional and not do "home-work" while I'm on my job. It's difficult at times." Sandy credits her success to a very cooperative family.

Difficulties in the early stages of the business came from others who saw her at home but didn't associate it with a "real" job. Sandy has strived to establish herself as a professional business by becoming registered and updating her skills through Penn State Cooperative Extension's child care courses.

The children enjoy planned activities and time to put together puzzles and play with toys.

Sandy is lavished with hugs, one of the benefits of her job.

A Busy Schedule

A visitor can easily detect the sincerity of Sandy's professional stance as well as her loving and caring attitude with the children. Seven children are fortunate enough to spend some or all of their day at this home away from home. (Two latch-key children and five full-time little ones).

The day's schedule varies somewhat, but there is a familiar routine that the children can settle into. Early arrivals use the separate play room as free-time to watch any special video tapes, watch educational programs on t.v., or engage in any other imaginative play until the school children board the bus. At that point all the preschool children join Sandy for breakfast.

Following clean-up, all gather around the child-size table for an activity. Each day is something different.

"Today we're making caterpillars," Sandy said.

The children hold up their pro ject made from egg cartons and yarn. The children chime in that they especially like playdough. Sometimes the children paint or color, but no matter what it is, they help choose the activity and are certainly proud of their accomplishments.

On a regular basis they all load into the van to retrieve kindergartners and attend storyhour at the local library. Even Sandy's van is equipped to keep small hands occupied. "I have pockets in the van with games for the children to play if we have to wait and I made teddy bear activity board to take with us also."

Nap time follows lunch and allows Sandy to prepare for the next day as well as try to get something in the oven for dinner. Usually there's quiet until the latch-key children arrive home, which arouses the preschoolers and creates a state of commotion. "We use that time to go for walks, read or play games. I have a very active bunch and they need to release their energy!"

Sandy displays the teddy bear activity board that keeps toddlers occupied while riding in the van.

The summer holds a great agenda for these active children. In addition to romping in the backyard, they all got to the Elizabethville swimming pool where they can play in the babypool or take swimming lessons. This summer Sandy is planning to try a small garden with the children!

"I don't focus alot of time on letters or numbers with the children, but we do cover them a little" she said. A calendar helps the children learn the concept of days, months, and time. Stickers are used to mark special days and record the weather. "I also use it to keep track of who's turn it is to sit up front in the van and choose the cassette tape at story time. It's fair and no one argues!"

Her dedication to the children is displayed in a number of ways but the latest activity is making t-shirts so they can easily be identified as a group when they go to story hour. The children will each decorate their own shirt.

Although there are two day care centers within a few miles Sandy always has potential customers. With more and more women working, the need for quality care continues to grow. When Sandy takes new children into her home she allots extra time with them to get them through the adjustment of separation from mom and dad to the day care program. Her philosophy is "How would I want my children treated?"

Her philosophy is acted out and would certainly be a comfort for any working parent looking for quality day care!

For further information on choosing a quality home day care call your local cooperative extension office. Day care courses are offered through your extension office.

Future Plans

Sometimes Sandy contemplates getting a different job, but she says "I like being home and I'd miss these kids." she added, I'm thinking about giving my business a name...maybe. 'Home Away From Home."'

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Returning from Ocean City, you pick up a bunch of lilies or marigolds while stopping for sweet corn at a roadside stand. Or perhaps some snapdragons catch your eye during a visit to the Southern Maryland Regional Farmers Market near Cheltenham.

If so, you are one of the many consumers who make the populous Washington D.C., to Boston corridor the largest market for fresh cut flowers in the United States. This geographic and demographic advantage makes growing cut flowers an attractive possible income supplement for Maryland farmers.

"Maryland florists purchase more than $100 million of floricultural products each year - but less than 25 percent of those products are raised in Maryland," said Dr. Will Healy. "The majority of cut flowers sold in this area are imported from the Caribbean region and South America."

Healy, an assistant professor of horticulture at the University of Maryland at College Park, said that cut flowers are high value crops that can be grown in conjunction with other traditionally produced, direct market crops.

"During the last several years, about 40 Maryland farmers have planted more than 25 acres of cut flowers," said Healy. "They have earned more than $500,000 in sales from those plantings."

Since 1987, more than 150 annual and perennial cultivars have been field-tested and evaluated by Healy under Maryland growing conditions. These tests have resulted in production methods for several species, such as asters and zinnias, that are

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

With several quite warm days in a row, spring seems to have arrived with a bang. Crocuses are popping up all over the front yard. Some are yellow, some violet and some a deep purple. Even the forsythia bushes behind the barn have burst into bloom. Those near our house have had all of their buds eaten off by the sparrows.

Last week was the Philadelphia Flower Show and my daughter-in-law, Lisa, and I went with a bus tour. Many people attended and it was difficult to get close to the beautiful exhibits. Some had names like, "Harmony in Design" or "Perennial Garden." These included herb gardens, wildflower gardens and rose gardens. There were lectures that could be attended. Some exhibits included waterfalls, old buildings and lots of statues. Many miniature bouquets were displayed in addition to pretty table settings.

After a lunch in the nearby crowded cafeteria, we boarded our bus for a trip to downtown Philadelphia to do some shopping. You can have your choice of large department stores or small specialty shops. So whether you want shoes, books or another bite to eat, they can accommodate you.

Later in the afternoon, as we sat in the sun to wait for our bus, we simply watched the people hurrying by. Well dressed men and women who hopped into nearby taxis and poorly dressed ones who dug through trash barrels. As we listened to the loud sirens of police cars and fire engines whizzing past us, I couldn't help but compare it to our relatively quiet life on the farm. One of the pleasures of living here is being able to hear yourself think. And, another plus is the river gently flowing downstream to the mill dam. It was quite a contrast.

Egg salad makes a versatile, yet easy, recipe for young chefs to try. Kids can use an egg slicer to safely chop the cooked eggs. They simply slice the eggs one way, then turn them around and slice the other way. Imaginations can run wild with stir-in possibilities. The final concoction can be scooped into baked potato skins, or cooked large pasta shells, or spread onto mini bagels, English muffin halves or even toasted waffles!

being raised by Maryland farmers.

Healy continues developing field cut flower production practices that require minimal amounts of labor and pesticide applications, concentrating on asters, snapdragons and Celosia, as well as larkspur and other members of the Delphinium genus. He also focuses on water, nutrient and pesticide management.

Precise water application is critical to maximizing stem elongation of developing flowers," Healy said. "This is important, since cut flowers are sold based on stem length."

Working with researchers at the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station's Salisbury and Upper Marlboro facilities, Healy conducts herbicide trials to determine the best weed and insect control methods. This portion of his project aims to minimize pesticide applications through the use of targeted spraying and beneficial insect predators.

One final production-related effort involves evaluating peak harvesting times using a heat unit technique. This method measures the number of degree days - a unit based on the standard average daily temperature - that pass before flowering occurs.

"Once peak flowering dates are known," Healy said, "growers can develop a marketing strategy that allows them to offer cut flowers throughout the growing season."

Although Maryland florists purchase $100 million of floricultural products annually, three-fourths of these products are imported. Dr. Will Healy, shown here with a clerk at Behnke Nurseries in Beltsville, believes Maryland farmers can obtain supplemental income by filling this supply niche. Healy, a University of Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station horticulturist, has field-tested and evaluated more than 150 cut flower cultivars since 1987. Photo Eric Kieley, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Exciting Meals With Mushrooms

Fresh mushrooms are mushrooming in popularity. The demand for the mighty mushroom keeps growing because more and more consumers are discovering its incomparable taste, interesting texture and versatility. Whether baked, broiled, sauteed, stuffed, marinated, served raw or used as a garnish, fresh mushrooms add a distinctive and flavorful mealtime accent.

In the produce department, you will find either white, brown or cream-colored mushrooms. Some mushrooms are closed arund the stem by a thin veil; however, those having open veils, caused by loss of water as they mature, are just as nutritious but have a more pungent flavor. In fact, many cooks prefer the flavor of open mushrooms, which are delicious in soups, sauces or sauteed.

Fresh mushrooms are high in potassium and are a fair source of several other minerals. Mushrooms are low in sodium and low in calories — an entire cup of mushrooms contains only 20 calories.

Perform a little snack or meal-time magic for your family or guest by trying these marvelous mushroom ideas:

MUSHROOM CASSEROLE

1 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
½ cup butter
9 slices bread, cubed
½ cup mayonnaise
½ cup celery, chopped
½ cup onions, chopped
2 eggs, beaten
½ cup milk
1 can cream of mushroom soup
Grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons butter, melted

Saute mushrooms in butter. Cover bottom of large buttered casserole dish with 3 slices cubed bread. Mix mayonnaise, celery and onions. Add mushrooms to mayonnaise mixture, stir well. Pour on top of bread layer in casserole. Layer 3 more slices bread. Combine eggs and milk. Pour on top of bread layer. Refrigerate at least 1 hour or overnight. Spread on mushroom soup and layer last 3 slices of bread on top. Drizzle with 2 tablespoons butter. Bake for 50 minutes at 350 degrees. Sprinkle on cheese and bake 10 more minutes.

Cooking with herbs can be confusing. The Village Herb Shop, Blue Ball, offers an "educational experience" by serving five-course dinners and luncheons. Each course, from the punch to the dessert, is enhanced by the use of herbs.

The dinner combined with a tour through their herb gardens and a lecture by herbalist Pat Dyer will enable you to confidently and creatively try herb cooking.

TOMATO DILL SOUP

8 tablespoon butter
3 cups yellow onions, peeled and sliced
2 garlic cloves, peeled and minced
1 bunch dill, finely chopped, plus sprigs for garnish
Salt and pepper to taste
2 quarts chicken stock
3 pounds Italian tomatoes, drained and seeded
1 tablespoon allspice
Pinch of sugar
Grated zest of 1 small orang
1 cup sour cream

Melt butter in soup pot. Add onions and cook over heat covered until tender, about 20 minutes. Add garlic and cook for another 5 minutes.

Add half of the dill, season to taste with salt and pepper. Cook uncovered for another 15 minutes. Add chicken broth, tomatoes, allspice and pinch of sugar. Bring to boil. Reduce heat. Cover and simmer for 45 minutes. Add orange zest. Remove from heat and cool slightly.

Puree soup. Return soup to the pot. Add remaining dill and simmer for 5 minutes. Serve immediately or cool and refrigerate, covered overnight. Taste and add more seasoning if necessary. Garnish soup hot or cold with a dollop of sour cream and a sprig of dill.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

Do you like your eggs well cooked? I hope so, because that's the recommended safe way — whether eggs are cooked in your microwave or in a skillet.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture says there may be some risk in eating eggs lightly cooked — including soft-cooked, soft scrambled, or sunny side up. Recommendations from it, and other health experts, are to cook eggs thoroughly until both the yolk and white are firm, not runny.

This warning comes because of outbreaks of food-borne illness caused by Salmonella enteritidis bacteria. Scientists believe the bacteria can go directly from infected laying hens into eggs before the shells are formed.

There's no danger in eating eggs, as long as the eggs are cooked well-done. The bacteria are killed when eggs are cooked thoroughly.

Be especially careful if you are elderly, chronically ill or pregnant. Your risk of becoming seriously ill from a food-borne illness is greater than the general population's. However, lower-risk people react differently to food bacteria. Some people will show no signs of illness and others can become seriously ill. So why take a chance?

Besides cooking eggs thoroughly, realize that lightly cooked foods containing eggs may also be risky. These include soft custard, soft meringue, chilled mousse and French toast. Avoid eating these homemade foods if they're made with eggs: mayonnaise, Caesar salad dressing, Hollandaise sauce, ice cream and eggnog. (Store-bought products and varieties made with pasteurized egg products are safe.) Use refrigerated grade AA or A eggs with clean, uncracked shells, and keep eggs refrigerated.

If you have questions about using eggs safely, call the USDA's toll-free Meat and Poultry Hotline, 1-800-535-4555. In Washington D.C. area, call (202) 447-3333. Hotline hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. EDT.

I strongly recommend cooking eggs thoroughly, but I also know the results of overcooking eggs. To microwave eggs to the well-done stage, yet prevent tough and rubbery-tasting eggs, use the following guidelines.

Don't microwave eggs too long and do allow standing time. Microwave the least amount of time given in a recipe. Then stir or lift edges and look at the eggs. If they're almost cooked — just slightly soft — stop microwaving. Let them stand, tightly covered, for a few minutes to finish cooking. Before serving, look again. Gently stir or lift edges. If the yolk and/or white are still runny, recover the dish and microwave on a lower power setting, 30 seconds for each one to two eggs. With a clean utensil, stir or lift edges to make sure the eggs are thoroughly cooked.

Use a lower power setting. This allows eggs to cook slower and more evenly. Medium (50 percent power, 325-350 watts) or Medium Low (30 percent power, about 200 watts) are most often used. Scrambled and poached eggs are often cooked on High. However, if you have problems getting them well-done and tender, try using a lower power setting.

During cooking, cover eggs tightly with plastic wrap or a tight-fitting lid. Stir scrambled eggs — and even omelets — at least once during cooking. Large amounts of scrambled eggs need more frequent stirring. Omelets using more than two large eggs are not recommended because it's difficult to get the center completely done without toughening the edges.

The easiest eggs to microwave to the well-done stage without toughening are scrambled eggs. A small omelet is a little trickier to keep from toughening, but it can be done. Try the two recipes below to practice microwaving safe, perfectly cooked eggs.

Scrambled Egg Boats

2 small (about 3x4-inch crusty French rolls)
Margarine or butter (room temperature)
Garlic powder or garlic salt
2 large whole eggs
4 egg whites (or 2 additional whole eggs)
¼ cup low-fat milk
¼ teaspoon dried thyme or summer savory
¼ teaspoon salt (optional)
Dash pepper
1 can (4 ounces) mushrooms, well drained
½ cup chopped, cooked, low-salt, low-fat cooked ham or cooked shrimp
½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese

Cut rolls in half, lengthwise; scoop out centers, leaving a half-inch shell or "boat." Cut centers into cubes and set aside. Lightly spread rolls with margarine and sprinkle with garlic powder; set aside.

With a fork or whisk, mix whole eggs and egg whites in a microwave-safe 1-quart measure or deep dish. Stir in milk, seasonings and bread cubes. Cover with plastic wrap. Microwave on Medium (50 percent power, 325-350 watts) 3 to 5 minutes or until puffy. Stir well, recover, and microwave (Medium) 1 to 1½ minutes or until eggs are almost cooked. Stir in mushrooms and ham, recover, and microwave (Medium) 1 to 2 minutes or until hot. Let stand, covered, about 2 minutes. Stir well; if eggs are still runny, microwave (Medium) 1 to 2 minutes or until set. Drain off any accumulated liquid. Spoon eggs into rolls. Set rolls on a microwave-safe plate; sprinkle each with cheese. Microwave (Medium) 1 to 1½ minutes or until cheese barely starts to melt. Serve hot. Makes 4 sandwiches.

Vegetable Omelet

1 teaspoon margarine or butter
2 large eggs
2 tablespoons water
Dash onion powder
Dash dried oregano leaves
Dash salt and pepper (optional)
1 cup frozen mixed vegetable blend
1 tablespoon water
1 teaspoon grated Parmesan cheese

Use a 6- to 7-inch diameter round casserole or reusable microwave dinner plate or a microwave-safe 8-inch pie plate. Melt butter in plate by microwaving (High) 20 to 30 seconds. Spread butter over plate bottom. Mix eggs, 2 tablespoons water, and seasonings until blended; pour into plate. Cover tightly with plastic wrap. Microwave on Medium (50 percent power, 325-350 watts) 2 minutes. Gently stir cooked edgges to center; smooth mixture and re-cover. Continue microwaving (Medium) 2 to 3 minutes, rotating plate after each 1 minute. Omelet is done when center is set, but still slightly moist. Let stand, covered, 1 to 2 minutes to finish cooking.

Meanwhile, place vegetables and 1 tablespoon water in a microwave-safe small dish; cover with plastic wrap. Microwave (High) 2 to 3 minutes or until hot. Drain well. Spoon evenly over omelet. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. With pancake turner, fold omelet in half. Slide onto serving plate. Makes 1 to 2 servings.

Each serving — ½ of recipe: 121 calories, 7g protein, 9g fat, 3g carbohydrate, 99mg sodium, 252mg cholesterol.

Hint: For more servings, make additional omelets or make scrambled eggs and add hot cooked vegetables after cooking.

SOUSE

6 to 8 pigs feet, split lengthwise. Wash them well and scrape the skin if it needs it. To help keep the feet in shape while you cook them, wrap them tightly with clean cheesecloth.

Put the feet in a large pot. Cover with cold water and add 1 rib of celery, 1 onion, 1 bay leaf, 8 peppercorns and a small bunch of parsley. Bring the pot to a boil, reduce heat and simmer slowly for 2 to 3 hours until the feet are tender. Skim off froth. Drain well, reserving two cups of the broth. Set the feet aside to cool.

Meanwhile slice up 1 onion and 2 carrots into thin slices and peel a clove or two of garlic. In a second pot put the two cups reserved broth, 2 cups white wine vinegar (white vinegar gives a stronger taste but can be used) 1 bay leaf, 8 peppercorns, 3 or 4 whole cloves and about ¼ teaspoon marjoram, mace and nutmeg. Bring to a boil and simmer about 5 minutes.

Unwrap the pigs feet, put them in a crock or jar (don't use metal). Add onion and carrot. Pour vinegar spice mixture over them; let cool then refrigerate for a few days before you eat them.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

"You can easily see the condition of the pasture," observes the farmer. "Look where the heifers are spending their time."

I'd already noticed. Scattered across the sloping hillside of the bred heifers' meadow pasture was the herd of black and white bodies. Heads down, they chomped with intent at the serious business of converting grass into future baby calves and fall milk production.

A lush, healthy green of similar shade has spread almost overnight across the lawn. Around its edges, in glorious hues of gold, yellow and ivory, bloom dainty blossoms of the rugged forsythias and sturdy daffodils. My beloved pussy-willow, grown so tall that only a few of the soft pinkish-gray buds are within reach any longer, is already past its prettiness peak.

But, darkening all this enjoyable pleasantness, come warnings of an expected, but not necessarily welcome, kind. Weather forecasters are hinting about that "S" word.

Snow. Also the "F" word. Freeze.

Is it my imagination or are we even more obsessed than usual these last few months with weather-watching? Or weather-dreading. Or weather-weariness. Latest devastations by Mother Nature's stern hand over the country are tornadoes, floods, and frozen-out fruit crops, impacting us all in various ways.

Still, whenever I get to thinking that we're more weather-wary — perhaps due to all the technology that can warn us about it so we can start worrying way ahead of time — than were generations ahead of us, I pull out a ragged clipping. It recounts weather lore of our ancestors, who had a neat way of making up rhymes to help them relate weather signs.

Hands up if you remember "Red sky at night, sailors' delight. Red sky at morning, sailors' take warning." Dependable, too, since red sky at morning almost always brings rain. Or a blanket of the "S" weather.

We also put great confidence in the reliable "Large halo 'round the moon, heavy rains very soon."

Lesser known is this, "When the donkey begins to bray, we shall have rain that day." But then, how many of us keep donkeys any more? Maybe it would be appropriate to relabel those phone weather forecasts Dial-A-Donkey.

And if you could hear the donkey over in the back forty, this had meaning: "Sound traveling far and wide, a stormy day will betide."

But if you couldn't hear the donkey, you'd best check out the trees in the nearest woodlot, according to this old rhyme: "Leaves showing their undersides, be very sure that rain betides."

Poplars, silver maples and sycamores are trees common to this area which do show their leaf undersides before impending storms. If your closest trees comprise a pine woods, or in bare-branch time of year, forget it.

More appropriate to this season is the following: "The oak leafs out before the ash; we'll have a spring of wet and splash. The ash leafs out before the oak; we'll know a spring of fire and smoke."

We got "splash" last weekend, but by the beginning of the week we were back to "smoke" in the stove. But, then, neither ash nor oak has leaves yet anyway, so maybe it's too early to put any relevance on that one.

Water quality will likely hold center stage as an issue of the decade of the '90s and on into the 20th century. But already improvements are being made over some conditions of the past, when open sewers and waste disposal affected air quality, as addressed by this little weather ditty: "When ditch and pond affect the nose, look then for rain and stormy blows."

My personal favorite, though, as quoted from a book called WEATHER WISDOM by Albert Lee, is this bit of indisputable fact, supposedly part an old Indian saying: "If you can't see the moon or stars, you're standing under a cloud."

Our resident meteorologist figures there's a hundred-percent-chance that one's a sure bet.

Kid's Korner

Kids See How Agriculture Works

Steve Allison pets the "funny-looking" four-day-old lamb at the Agriculture In Classroom presentation.

Anita Meck, Lancaster County Poultry Queen, answers questions about the 40,500 layers on her Willow Street farm — lots of questions, like, how does an egg hatch? And how many eggs does a chicken lay, anyway?

Katy Bennett, third grader at Rohrerstown Elementary, wants to take one of the chicks home. If only teacher Mrs. Sager would let her.

"It feels kind of sticky!" says Lauren Stephani as she holds a bundle of newly sheared wool. Lamb raising was a topic at the Agriculture In the Classroom presentation by Beth Rohrer to third graders Wednesday at Rohrerstown Elementary School.

ANDY ANDREWS

ROHRERSTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — They asked lots of questions.

Questions like — are the sheep rough? How do they eat? What do they eat? How old is the lamb? Does she always wear diapers?

Diapers? Well, this four-day old lamb wore a diaper to keep owner Beth Rohrer "from getting wet."

Rohrer presented the little Dorset/Hampshire/Suffolk lamb to about 65 curious third graders at Rohrerstown Elementary School on Wednesday. The presentations are part of an ongoing "Agriculture In The Classroom" program featured in many county schools.

Rohrer helps manage 140 head of sheep, including 62 lambs and 9 ewes ready to lamb, on a farm west of East Petersburg. The Rohrers also raise hogs and field crops, including corn, soybean, wheat, barley, oats, and fruit.

The Polypay breed sheep on Rohrer's farm include many lambs from the commercial flock, which are born as twins, triplets, or even quadruplets.

"It's mom didn't have enough milk, and could have a parasite problem," said Rohrer. She asked the kids what a parasite was.

"It's a virus," said one third-grader.

"No, it's a bug," said another.

"Yes, it's a bug, growing on the outside of the animal or inside, so we're checking to see if that may be the problem," Rohrer said. So far, the little lamb is healthy.

Afterward, Rohrer answered questions from the class, including when sheep are sheared and when lamb's wool becomes sheepskin.

Just a few days ago the bird held by Laura Ranck hatched.

"Did you know that the largest weight for commercial turkey was 81 pounds?"

The class guffawed. "Wow!" said Steve Allison, from Mrs. Sager's class. Students listened intently to Anita Meck, Lancaster County Poultry Queen, assisted by Mr. Rooster and about 50 chicks.

Meck spoke to the students about the three different poultry groups and the low fat, high protein, and low cholesterol benefit of eating poultry.

She answered questions about her family's 40,500 layer flock and the hogs and beef raised on the Willow Street farm.

"Yesterday, the kids got a chance to see a three-week-old calf," said Mrs. Sager. "They loved it. Feeding the cow was one of the day's highlights."

They only had one question in mind, however. Should we name the calf Jordan? Or Jordanna?

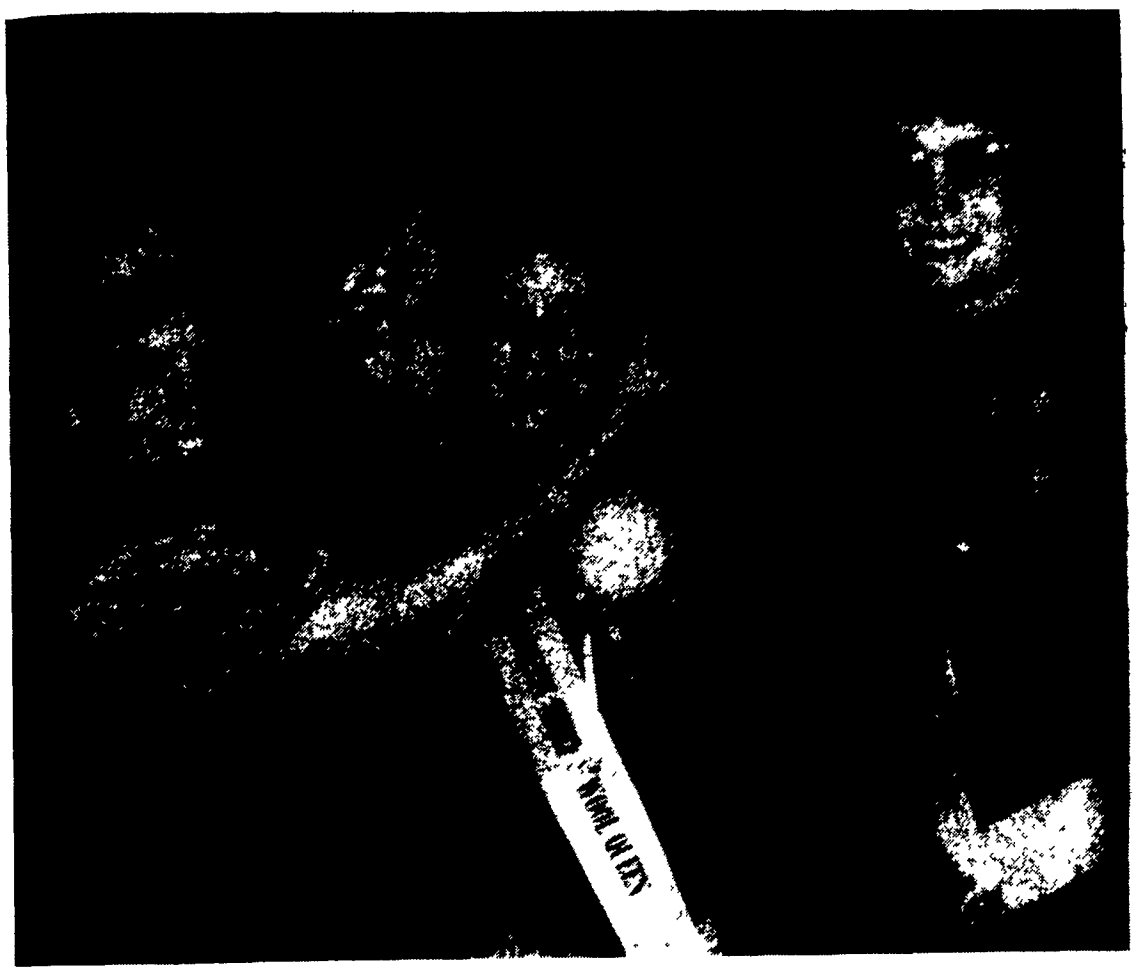
Bedford County Chooses Sheep And Wool Queen



Merilee Werner is crowned Bedford County Sheep and Wool Queen by outgoing queen, Shannon Lafferty. Looking on is the first runner-up, Jennifer Hillegass.

BY LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.)— A Chestnut Ridge senior, Merilee Werner, who spent her junior year as a Rotary Exchange student in New Zealand was crowned Bedford County's Sheep and Wool Queen at a banquet held on Friday evening, March 16.

Held at the Bedford Church of the Brethren in Bedford, the contest featured four Bedford County girls, all involved in raising sheep.

Merilee told the group of lamb and wool producers, "By public speaking and demonstrations, the Sheep and Wool Queen can help to make the public aware of the advantages of eating lamb or wearing wool.

"If the Sheep and Wool Queen would talk to just five people a day for 365 days of the year, there would be 1,825 people knowing more about the industry," Merilee pointed out.

As an exchange student in Wairou, New Zealand, Merilee lived with a family on a farm with a flock of 6,000 sheep. She visited sheep stations where there were as many as 24,000 sheep.

"Learning," she said, "never stopped and among the many new talents she discovered was knitting. "I knitted this scarf," she said as she unfolded a colorful long woolen scarf.

She admitted that this skill is something she would not have learned in the United States because, "I would not have taken the time. The social life in New Zealand is not as busy as here."

She noted that New Zealand is a land of three million people and ten million sheep.

Crowning the new queen was Shannon Lafferty, the 1989 Bedford County Sheep and Wool Queen.

Runner-up was Jennifer Hillegass, a sophomore at Chestnut Ridge High School who raises Suffolks. She presently owns five registered sheep.

Other contestants included Krystal Krieger, a freshman at Chestnut Ridge High School, and Candace Crawford, a student at Everett Area High School.

Officers elected for Sheep and Wool Producers for the coming year included Dick Barkly, president; Kevin Koontz, vice president; and Sharon Weaver, treasurer.

Educate Your Senses At the Village Herb Shop

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

BLUE BALL (Lancaster Co.) — If you're interested in landscaping, cooking or decorating with herbs, visit the Village Herb Shop.

The sprawling herb business located in the little town of Blue Ball, east of Lancaster, immerses visitors in the wonderful possibilities that herbs offer.

Pat Dyer, who manages the business, said, "We offer an educational experience."

Garden tours, workshops, extensive literature, and dinners are ways the shop finds effective in educating others.

The most outstanding feature of their educational experience is the equisive five-course meals served in a country Victorian setting.

Chef Sally Kramer prepares the meals. Each course, from the punch to the dessert, is enhanced by the the use of herbs.

Unlike many herbalists, Kramer uses salt, sugar and meat in the preparation of the meals.

She said, "We believe that most people prefer a moderate approach to herbs although we will prepare a vegetarian or salt-free or sugar-free meal if requested by a group of 12 or more."

The meal alone is an impressive affair, but it is not limited to merely the dinner. It begins with a tour of the herb gardens where guests can pinch and sniff the plants that are marked for cooking, medicine or tea use. Dyer explains the use of various herbs and gives ideas on planting and landscaping with them, but does not get into the medicinal use of herbs.

Dinner is served in the enclosed patio with its brick floor and country-Victorian decor. A typical meal, like that scheduled for April 20 at 6 p.m., includes a herbal punch, canapes, herb soup, leg of lamb, saffron rice, spring vegetable mixture, spinach bread, cheesecake, herbal tea and gourmet coffee.

"When the meal is finished, Sally reveals the herbs she has used to prepare the meal and shares recipes and hints for cooking with herbs.

"Herbs give food an interesting taste, but it's better to experiment with one at a time before throwing a bunch of herbs into a dish," Sally said.

She tells how to make herb butters, cream cheese dips, vinegars, oils, herb cheese and beverages.

All of her dinners are attractively arranged and garnished. One of Sally's specialties is making edible flower dishes available only in season. She tells guests how to layer herb leaves in bottom of cake to flavor it. Herbs are used to make tasty jellies, sorbets, and candied herbs.

Sally also caters dinners under the name Good Thyme Catering.

After the dinner, Pat Dyer presents a short lecture on gardening with herbs. She often uses slides to show the beauty of landscaping with herbs or dried arrangements that can be made with them.

"There is a lot being done with herb landscaping," she said. "Gardening is America's number one pasttime and provides good therapy and useful produce."

Pat has taken classes in landscaping and will serve as an advisor to those who ask, but she is not licensed.

Chef Sally Kramer prepares equisite five-course meals for guests at the Village Herb Shop, Blue Ball. Each course, from the punch to the dessert, is enhanced by the use of herbs.

The Village Herb Shop offers everything and anything related to herbs, from dips, potpourri, tea pots to jewelry.

Beginnings

Pat said the business began five years ago when her parents, Paul and Dorothy Weaver, purchased the property.

"We had big ideas, but found it took a lot of more work than we ever imagined," Pat, who has two children, said.

"We started out with the dream of growing organic herbs," Pat recalls.

The first morning Pat rose early and picked mint, hung it on the line, striped it, dried it and sold the package for a mere 65 cents.

"Right away I learned I would not make any money doing this," Pat admitted.

So the business changed. "I love to work in the gardens, smell the fragrance and experiment with the beauty of landscaping," Pat said. Now instead of drying herbs for others, Pat encourages customers to purchase the plants she has started. She instructs customers on the proper way to grow, display and use the herbs.

For those who prefer to purchase fresh or dried herbs, the shop has commercial and organic herbs.

One of the unique aspects of the shop is their drying shed where customers can cut the amount they want to purchase.

Herbs can be grown on the windowsill or planted outside the door. Basic herbs that are good to begin include dill, basil, chives, rosemary, French tarragon, thyme, and Italian parsley.

Pat's dad added a greenhouse and figured out a solar system to heat it.

Pat's parents have purchased surrounding properties to enlarge the Herb Shop's services.

Gift shop

The gift shop has three rooms for display. "We started out selling herbal teas, gourmet coffee and herbs," Pat said. "And one thing led to another. "Now we sell everything herb related and even some things not herb related." For example, jewelry with flower designs and stamps to make your own stationery.

Herb gardening workshop

In slide show presentations, gardens are shown at different stages of growth. Both the mistakes and the right way to place individual plants are shown. "A picture is worth a thousand words," Pat said.

Perennials, annuals and ground cover is combined to enhance the beauty of each plant. Lots of handouts will be distributed during classes offered on April 16 at 7 p.m. and on April 18 at 1 p.m. Cost is $7 and includes a 30 minute consultation for drawing your individual garden plan if requested.

Dried material workshop

Wreath bases, pins and dried materials are sold. For the do-it-yourselfer, a class on growing and preserving everlastings is offered on April 23 at 7 p.m. and April 24, at 1 p.m. Cost is $5. The class will instruct others of the best time to pick flowers and grasses from the wild, as well as what to grow in your garden to preserve. Different methods of drying will be discussed and some tips on working with dried flowers will be demonstrated.

Herb cooking workshop

A demonstration on using herbs in a variety of dishes will be presented by Sally Kramer. There will be lots of tasty samples at the May 15 session at 7 p.m. and at the May 16 session at 1 p.m. Cost is $7.

Herb dinners

Individual reservations can be made for the third Friday of each month April through October, but Pat said, "We will prepare a luncheon or dinner at any time for groups of 12 who make reservations two weeks in advance." Boxed luncheons are available for a group of six to 25 people with one week's notice.

Prices vary from $15 to $17 and includes a garden tour, gourmet herb dinner, and a short lecture. Each dinner includes a five-course meal in which herbs have been used to enhance the flavor of food. Each meal has a theme that compliments the type of food served and the topic of lecture.

Individuals can make reservations for the herb dinners scheduled for April 20, May 18, June 15, July 20, August 17, September 21 and October 19.

Groups may requested available dates.

"We feel we give a good overview of herbs and are both eager to share with those who are eager to learn," Pat said.

All workshops and dinners require a reservation and deposit. The gift shops are opened weekdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. except Thursday until 8 p.m. and Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Visitors at the Village Herb Shop tour the herb gardens, drying sheds, and gift shops to experience the fragrance and taste of herbs. Chef Sally Kramer and Herbalist Pat Dyer stand outside the drying shed where guests can cut bunches of herbs for purchase.

Create Baskets From Pine Needles And Straw

Barb Bonfanti holds the long pine needles that she uses to create her coiled pine needle baskets. She will teach others to make the baskets at the Market House Craft Center, Lancaster, on April 7; 9 to 5 p.m.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Give Barbara Bonfanti a bunch of dried pine needles and she is content.

After hours of meticulous labor, she can create a $50 basket out of the pine needles.

As Barb coils the long leaf pine needles to begin a basket, she admits, "I swore I'd never make coiled pine needle basket, but I took one class four years ago — just to say I could do it — and now I'm hooked."

The tightly woven baskets stitched with raffia, a natural fiber from a plant off the coast of Africa, are seldom found in the county. But according to Barb's research, the coiled pine needle basket is one of the oldest and most universal methods of basket making.

Gathered from longleaf pines found mostly in California, Mexico and Florida, the needles measure 8- to 18-inches in length.

A friend in Florida supplies Barbara with the pine needles that also can be purchased from a craft supply store for $11 to $12 a bundle.

To remove debri and insects, Barb washes the pine needles in soapy water, rinses, and simmers on stove for 10 minutes.

"If you don't, insects will literally eat your basket after it is woven," she said.

The pine needles are dried on a screen and bundled so the needles stay straight.

Unlike most baskets, it is not woven; instead the needles are coiled and stitched with raffia that has been moistened.

To begin, the center of the bottom of the basket is worked with wet pine needles. After a two-inch diameter, the the pine needles are used dry since this creates a much firmer basket.

"The beginning is the hardest part of making the basket," Barb explained, "because it must be kept tight."

Barb explained that the trick in keeping the basket straight, is to mark the beginning point. A change of stitches, shape or direction must always happen at that point.

With agile movements, Barb coils the pine needles and with a taspestry needle threaded with raffia pierces the reed to form a split stitch spiral.

Every basket is different because it is not made with a mold but free formed and hand shaped. Many times, Barb forms a lid. She likes to create new techniques and designs. Sometimes she uses clay or white birch bark or embellishes the basket with beads, feathers, and pine cones.

The pine needles can also be dyed, but Barb suggests concentrated on making a vase or basket before experiement with color.

"It's so surprising to create something out of nothing," Barb said. "There is a lot you can do once you get going."

"A beginner can make the baskets," Barb said, "but people either hate it or love making them — there is no in between — since it is time consuming."

Barbara has explored many styles and techniques of basketry over the past nine years. Although she weaves traditional style baskets, she prefers the freedom of interpretation of design that the coiled pine needle and the Nantucket Lightship baskets allow.

Both are labor intensive and require about 10 to 20 hours to complete.

As a juried member of the PA Guild of Craftsmen and the Lancaster Designer-Craftsman, Barbara's baskets are displayed at the Donecker's Artworks, Ephrata, and at eight craft shows that she attends annually.

Barbara will teach coiled pine needle basket making at the Market House Craft Center, Lancaster, on April 7 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Market House Craft Center, located in the lower level of Southern Market Center, Queen and Vine Streets in downtown Lancaster offers classes in clay, stained glass, rug braiding, woodcarving, woodgraining, Windsor stool making, and in learning to succeed at your craft business. To register for the class or to receive a schedule of the workshops available, call (717) 295-1500 or 291-2154.

Window Treatments You Can Make Yourself

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LOGANVILLE (York Co.) — Stunning window treatments are on the rise. So are prices to dress them.

For that reason, Penn State Extension is offering classes in drapery and window treatments.

"Making your own window treatments is an excellent way to save money and give you personal satisfaction," said A. Joan Lamberson, York extension home economist.

The York extension, like many other counties throughout the state, recently trained Master Clothing and Textile volunteers, who in exchange for 30 hours of training donate 40 hours of volunteer extension work.

Correna Ness, one of the volunteers, is excited about the extension classes. She said, "I'd like to start a home-based business in drapery and window treatments. I took the class to gain hands on instruction."

Correna and Paula Jones, who also completed the training class, are currently planning to teach others at the York extension as their payback.

Paula, an accomplished seamtress and a 4-H sewing project leader, said that she gained more knowledge by taking the class.

Both volunteers are busy stitching samples that they will use in the class.

"Some of the window treatments are quite simple to do but they really dress up windows," she said.

For example, the mini blinds and the vertical blinds that are so popular today, often appear plain and drab. A puff or balloon valance attached to the top dresses up the window.

According to the volunteers, prices on window treatments vary. "Materials may cost more than ready-made draperies from a chain store, but the quality in making your own is much higher," Lamberson said.

Classes teach fabric selection and measurement. A representative from Dannemanns' local sewing supply store taught the volunteers and donated bolts of fabric for the volunteers to make samples.

Easy valances, balloon, Roman and Austrian shades and pleated drapery instructions are taught.

Instruction is given in class. If participants desire, they may make draperies at home, but extension volunteers said, "Some people may not want to sew their own. They may take the class to gather ideas for selecting ready-made or custom-made draperies."

Class size is limited to 25 participants.

Sewing for special needs

Extension also offers classes in sewing for special needs. Sherry Stauffer, who participated in the training class, said that sewing for the handicapped, opens a whole new area of sewing.

People with a physical condition find it difficult to dress. An estimated one-fourth of the U.S. population experience a temporary or permanent disability. Older adults with limited range of motion resulting from arthritis or other conditions often need assistance with putting on clothing.

Velcro fasteners are easy for most handicapped to use than zippers or buttons and elastic waistbands are easier to slip into.

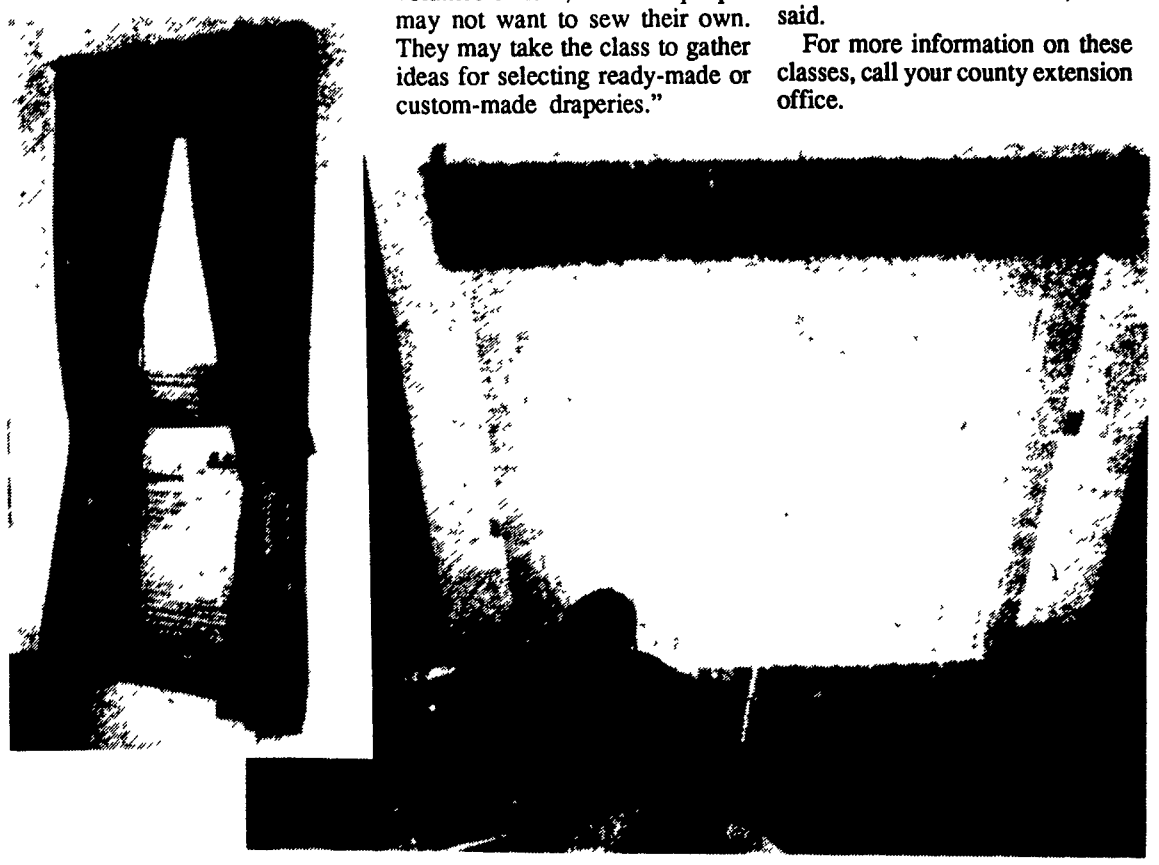
Workshop participants learn to adapt slacks, shirts, pajamas, and underwear for children and adults.

"Each medical situation is different," Sherry said. The workshop provides resources, patterns and instructions on fitting.

She learned that people who sit in wheelchairs need longer pants. If the back of the jacket is cut off at the waist, it keeps the back from bunching up.

"Taking the class on sewing for special needs is a good way for families to do alterations," she said.

For more information on these classes, call your county extension office.



Window toppings dress up popular mini blinds and vertical blinds.

A Safe Place to Grow and Play

Last weekend I visited with friends who had just brought home their first baby. Their apartment was filled with fuzzy pink stuffed animals and pastel baby blankets — as well as the not-so-glorious diaper boxes, baby wipes and aspirator. Having a child adds a lot of energy and excitement to a family's home. My friends' joy was obvious, but joy can turn to agony when parents forget to take necessary precautions to provide their children with a safe place to grow and play.

Sometimes it's the least suspected items that can turn playful giggles into silent terror. The Consumer Product Safety Commission reports that of all children's products, balloons are the leading cause of suffocation death. This doesn't necessarily mean that children should never enjoy balloons. It does mean that adults should be very careful to supervise this kind of play. Dispose of underinflated balloons and broken balloons.

As a parent, you may be unaware of risks in your own home. However, once recognized, these risks can be reduced or eliminated. Do you own a reclining chair? These have been responsible for injuries to small children who think the chairs are great hiding places. It's especially dangerous to leave two children unattended on a recliner. Arms and heads can get pinched when the foot rest snaps down. Some levers take few muscles to use when they're worn.

Slats in cribs, fences, and deck railings should be less than 2-3/8ths inches apart. Baby gates should have a straight top edge. If the gate is accordion style, the "V's" should be less than 1-1/2 inches in width.

When rearranging a room, place furniture away from windows for your child's safety. Children like to crawl up on the back of furniture to a window sill. Unfortunately window screens are designed to keep insects out not children in. A child can easily fall through a window and injure himself.

Young children should always be attended in the bathroom. In the last fifteen years, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission reports at least 383 children drowned in bathtubs, basins, hot tubs, showers and jacuzzis in as little as six inches of water. Forty-nine children drowned after falling head-first into a toilet bowl. Others have drowned in cleaning buckets left in a kitchen or driveway.

Even grandparents and relatives need to be concerned about household dangers. If you have little visitors, think about the safety of your living room, porch, or office. Two or three children, visiting in a new "play" room, can be extremely creative — creative in ways that may unknowingly bring them risks.

You can reduce risks by purchasing items that have built-in safety features. You can also restrict a child's access to a dangerous area. This may mean putting a safety latch on a door that leads to the backyard or wading pool. Also put safety latches on cupboards with household chemicals and medicines. Televisions, baby walkers, and sandboxes are not babysitters. WE must watch our children.

Each year more children die in home accidents than from all childhood diseases combined. Watch young children as they play. Nothing can substitute for careful supervision. Taking the time to close a box, cover a container and oversee a youngsters game is worth it. Our moments of frustration or bother are a bargain compared to the cost of a child's health.

As your children grow, the safety concerns change from thoughts about toys and poisonous plants to warnings about strangers to requests not to drink and drive. But it's always important for the adults (who have sometimes learned lessons the hard way, who have been scared out of their wits with close-calls) to provide children with a loving and safe home.

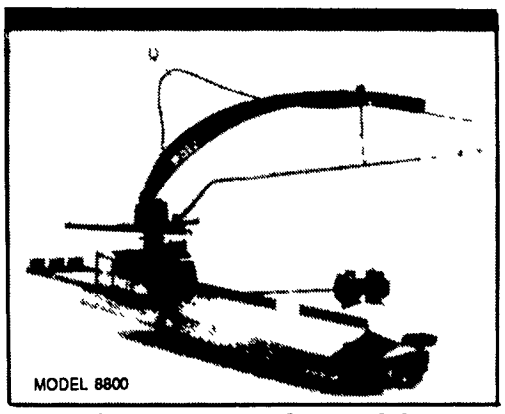
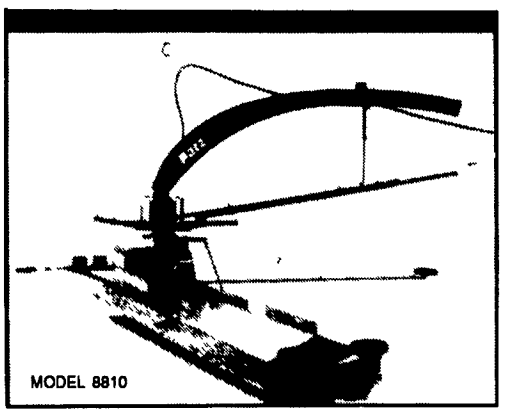
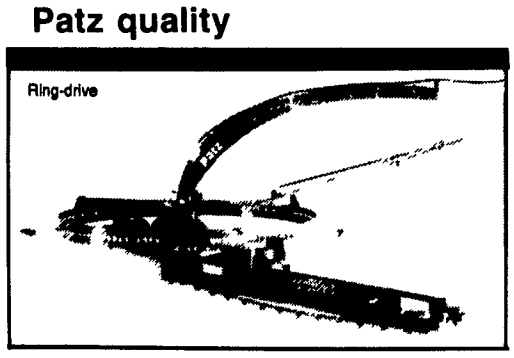
Patz - The Only Manufacturer Of Augers And Chain That Feature 4 Silo Unloaders To Fit Your Price And Performance Needs



Dual-auger surface-drive silo unloader with Patz quality



Dual-auger center-drive silo unloader with Patz quality



RD-820 RING-DRIVE SILO UNLOADER
Both silo unloaders have a double-hook gathering chain with hardened steel cutters and claws that cut through frozen and packed silage.

98B SURFACE-DRIVE SILO UNLOADER

Why Patz is No. 1

- Durable Patz hook-and-eye link chain. Progression forging builds extra strength into hook-and-eye link contact points. Final heat treating increases hardness, strength and wear resistance.
- Four-tooth sprocket drives every link behind the hook--the link's thickest and strongest point.
- Chain flexibility for various layouts.
- Select 2" flites for solid manure or 4" high flites for slurry manure. ¼-inch-thick flites are welded to Patz links. ½-inch-thick wear shoes extend flite life.
- Three drive unit sizes match your gutter length and allow expansion.
- Corner wheel top-and-bottom flanges guide the chain around the corner. Corner wheel assemblies remove easily for service without concrete breakout.
- Heavier XH link available for extremely long pulls.

Fresh Broccoli is a Nutritious Bargain

Fresh broccoli can be found at special prices in produce counters almost every weekend at this time of the year. Ninety percent of the broccoli we find in our markets now comes from the lush fields in California.

In common with other leafy vegetables, fresh broccoli is nutritionally rich. It is a good source of Vitamin A and an excellent source of Vitamin C.

When shopping for fresh broccoli, look for a firm, compact cluster of small flower buds, with none opened enough to show the bright yellow flower. Bud clusters should be dark green or sage green, or even green with a decidedly purplish cast. Stems should not be too thick or tough.

Avoid broccoli with spread bud cluster, enlarged or open buds, yellowish green color, or wilted condition. These are signs of overmaturity and over-long display.

To prepare broccoli for cooking, wash broccoli and trim the main stem slightly. It is not necessary to remove the stem, since the whole stalk is edible. Make lengthwise gashes in the stems, almost to the flowerettes if they are more than one-half inch in diameter.

The Saucepan Method: Place broccoli loose in a saucepan with one inch of boiling water. Cook with cover off the first five minutes, and then cook covered for 5 to 10 minutes, or only until crisp-tender. Or, if you desire, leave cover on during the entire cooking period, but lift lid three or four times to allow the gases to escape, and thus protect the green color of the vegetable. Remember, cook as briefly as possible in a small amount of water, both to preserve the crisp texture and to conserve nutrients.

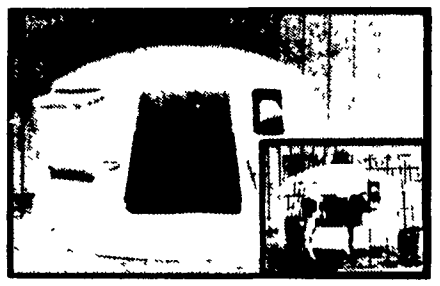
Poly Dome Means Healthier Calves.

All-Season

Raising calves is no easy chore! But dairymen everywhere have discovered the benefits of raising their calves in Poly Dome Calf Nurseries In fact, Poly Dome is the first choice of dairy farmers throughout the United States and Canada After comparing Poly Dome Calf Nurseries with modified wooden hutches, the University of Minnesota-Morris found that Poly Dome calves were healthier and grew faster than calves kept in wooden huts And Poly Dome is now being tested at several universities across the country with similar results

According to a study at Vermont Technical College, this rotatable air vent distinguishes Poly Dome from other huts on the market



POLY DOME 60" (H) x 86 (D)

CONSTRUCTED FOR YEARS OF MAINTENANCE-FREE SERVICE.

You'll get more out of an Eby aluminum grain body. Lightweight and rugged aluminum provides rigid, fuel-efficient support to fill your grain hauling needs.

Eby packs years of experience, workmanship and performance into every aluminum body it manufactures. And special Eby options let you customize your body to your individual operation. Available in standard lengths, each unit is designed to provide you with an investment in durable performance and practical economy.

Look over these outstanding features.

- Less weight. Eby aluminum bodies weigh up to 30% less than comparable steel and wood construction.
- Less maintenance. Aluminum construction won't rust or rot - never needs painting.
- Long-life durability. Heavy-duty structural components and hollow-tube frame combine with aluminum floor and sides to stand up to years of hard work.

Flash (2) Late Model Used Timpte's Nice Priced Right

Got Grain? Then get the trailer that is Timpte tough... the Super Hopper. It's not only built to take it...it's also built to cut fuel costs. The Super Hopper is lightweight and aerodynamically designed to reduce wind drag. When there's grain to be hauled, Timpte does the haulin' best and pulls a lot easier than the rest.

24 foot Ruff Neck trailer on left is Eby's workhorse. Trailer on the right is an economical, 16 foot Wrangler.

Get outstanding value in EVERY Eby trailer.

Whether it's a top-of-the-line Ruff Neck or an economical Wrangler, you know your livestock trailer is built to last if it's from Eby.

Aluminum construction is one of the main reasons these trailers are so durable and reliable. They'll never rust through or need welding. In fact, without ever being painted, an Eby livestock trailer will stay looking new for years.

Standard features make your Eby trailer a profitable investment. Extra-heavy axles, brakes, wheels and tires. Thick aluminum sheet flooring. Sturdy posts and rails. Even an aerodynamically designed front end is standard.

And, while standard features make even the economical Eby Wrangler far more than an average economy-model, we custom-build everything we make. So you tell us what you want. Choose from a long list of options. Select those features you need for your particular operation. Whether it's a Wrangler or deluxe Ruff Neck, the trailer you buy will be the trailer you need.

POULTRY POINTERS
EGG CHOLESTEROL CONTENT
By Forest Muir,
Professor of Poultry Science

A recent article in the Poultry Science Journal presented data that should be of extreme interest to the egg producer. A survey was conducted to determine the cholesterol content of eggs obtained from 19 table egg flocks in Georgia. Information on flock age, egg production rate, and dietary parameters were also obtained for each flock in the study. The average egg cholesterol level was 195 milligrams per egg (all the cholesterol in an egg is contained in the yolk). These data reaffirm the action of USDA in reducing the estimate of the cholesterol content of a large egg from 274 milligrams to 213 milligrams.

The authors presented the cholesterol content of the eggs in two forms -- milligrams per egg and milligrams per gram of yolk. The authors correlated the age of the layers, rate of lay, egg weight, yolk weight and nutrient content of the ration with the cholesterol content expressed as milligrams per gram of yolk. The correlations were all nonsignificant, indicating that none of the production factors had an influence on the cholesterol content of yolk material. The average cholesterol level of egg yolk in this study was 11.7 milligrams per gram of yolk. The production factors and the total cholesterol content of the eggs were significantly correlated. The production factors and yolk size were also significantly correlated indicating that factors that influence yolk size will also influence the total cholesterol content of the egg. The influence is on the amount of yolk in the egg, not the cholesterol content of each gram of yolk material.

Feed Influences Milk Production Most

GEORGE F.W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

Feeding For High-Protein Milk

It is fair to say that no other single factor on the dairy farm influences milk production as much as feed.

Sure, genetics makes a difference, but it is still second in line behind feed.

Of course, labor skill and management skill also contribute, but feed is the number-one culprit when problems occur. Feed is the number-one secret in success and profit stories with dairy animals. This includes commercial dairymen as well as breeders of male and female breeding stock, which are sold on the basis of outstanding records.

And how are these records made? By extra feed and extra feeding skill, to a large extent.

So it is only logical that we look to feed as the secret to changes, not just of yields, but for composition of milk also. Yet to change milk composition is not quite as easy as one might hope or expect.

We can readily produce low-fat milk on the farm by taking away the hay and most other roughage and fiber sources, and by heavily feeding grain supplements to our dairy animals.

In contrast, trying to increase the fat content of milk through feeding above the normal average for a certain animal only works when we feed in such a way that normal milk flow is reduced, by a shortage of feed protein, a shortage of water or a shortage of succulence in the feeds.

We can also affect the quality of fat in milk through feeds: more grass pasture and corn produces soft milk fat with a low melting point; oil and lard supplements tend to do the same; while certain grains, like barley and tallow, produce more solid fats in the milk.

Thus, we see the possibility in the not too distant future of producing milk with more than the current contents of the most desirable monounsaturated fats in milk and reducing the less desirables from a human nurtrition diet standpoint -- saturated and polyunsaturated fats.

Research will begin to list those feeds for dairy animals that produce certain kinds of milk fat, just as it is already available for people, which food to eat to affect which kind of body fats and at which levels, and even influence cholesterol.

The next question is how can we influence protein contents of milk?

This is of increasing consumer interest as we have less need and markets for milk fat. Across the country and in other countries, there is a growing interest in paying farmers extra for milk protein contents above the normal average.

Some milk markets, and even cheese plants, are paying between 10 cents to 20 cents per point of protein test above the normal 3.2%.

In our work at the Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station, we have found, like others, that one can keep the milk protein contents at the 3.2% level and push it 1 or 2 points above that amount when one is never short of energy, even for high-milking animals, every day.

Some research has shown that feed protein and sufficient amounts of undegradable feed protein are equally influential.

It has even been calculated that 1 percent increase in milk protein is related to 1 pound of soybean oilmeal (or equivalent) in the ration, or that 1 percent increase in the feed protein will raise milk protein by .02 percent.

Nevertheless, it is easier to drop milk protein content below the genetics of a certain animal by feeding mistakes rather than increase it above the average, just like the situation with milk fat contents.

The best advice on how to feed for high-protein contents in milk is to not be short of energy and, at the same time, not be short of rumen undegradable besides the degradable protein (optimal daily ratio in the ration 60:40 percent); have fiber carbohydrates not more than 60 percent of total carbohydrates; have fat supplements limited to 1½ pounds per cow per day, and not in the unprotected or unemulsified form; and avoid acidic rumen conditions from grain (roughage ratios above 60:40).

This may sound complicated, but it isn't, as many successful farmers can attest. And not all of them use computer feeding programs, which, of course, make life and ration calculations much easier on the dairy farms.

Now, and in the future, computer feeding programs are also more profitable.

Aquaculture Will Increase In '90s

COLUMBIA, Mo. — The rather quiet, conservative fish farming industry that we have known for the last 10 to 15 years will disappear in the 1990s, according to Dr. Thomas Zeigler, one of the American industry's pioneers and current leaders.

"Government industry, market, international, and excitement factors will all tug and pull at this industry beyond all imagination. The aquaculture revolution which started in the 1980s will explode in the 1990s," Zeigler said in the keynote address at the recent Missouri Fish Farming Days Conference.

Competition within the industry also will increase, he said.

Zeigler is a director of the World Aquaculture Society, vice president of the U.S. Aquaculture Suppliers Association, and a member of the Fish Farming Expo Industry Advisory Committee. He is president of Zeigler Bros. Inc. of Gardners, Pennsylvania, one of the industry's largest feed and equipment companies.

Members of the industry must develop strategies for coping and capitalizing on a series of changes that can be expected in the coming decade, Zeigler said. He said the industry can safely assume that:

- There will be many few producers in the 1990s.
- Fish farm productivity could double or quadruple by the end of the century.
- The industry will face more and tougher permitting and regulatory challenges.
- Foreigners will provide "significant competition" for U.S. fish farmers in the American seafood market.
- Fish farmers will face a continuing series of decisions on rapidly developing new equipment and technologies.
- Commodity prices will fluctuate widely.
- The industry will solve most of its production, disease, and effluent management problems in the coming decade.
- Both per capita and total seafood consumption will increase in the United States.

The three biggest hopes for increasing productivity, Zeigler said, are:

- Increased use of liquid oxygen to improve water quality.
- Better feed selection and delivery.
- Increased use of the technology now available to achieve sex reversal in fish and to produce triploid fish and shellfish. Researchers and producers have demonstrated that fish growth can be accelerated and fish quality can be improved through manipulation of the fish sexes.

Zeigler called upon the industry to unite behind the new National Aquaculture Association to create a better legislative and regulatory environment for the business.

"The big battles which our industry faces cannot be fought and won by small industry segments or splinter groups," he said. "The big battles take total industry effort."

The entire seafood industry must work together to increase consumption.

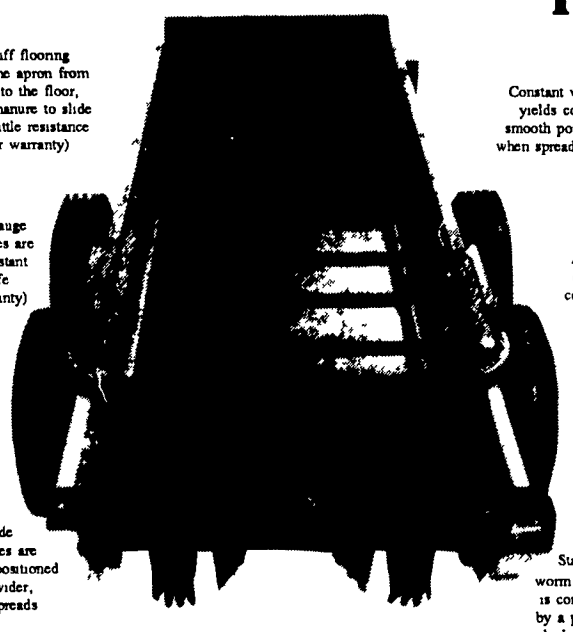
GEHL® Machines That Make Sense

HAUL MANURE WITH A GOOD SPREADER - Proven Performance Features & Economical Price Makes Gehl Your Box Spreader Choice!

Even when it's empty,



Gehl Tuff flooring prevents the apron from freezing to the floor, allowing manure to slide out with little resistance (10 year warranty)

Constant velocity pto yields continuous, smooth power transfer when spreading on turns

Extra wide beater paddles are symmetrically positioned to deliver wider, more even spreads

Standard two speed worm drive transmission is completely protected by a polyethylene shield which won't rust or dent

it's loaded.

GEHL - The New Leader In Box Spreaders

FULL 10-YEAR WARRANTY ON FLOOR & SIDES

Gehl-Tuff floor
In cold weather, the slick Gehl-Tuff surface reduces the force needed to break a frozen apron loose from the floor. So your whole load glides out with little resistance. And less apron pull means less wear and tear on drives and apron chains.

Heavy-duty gear boxes
Two heavy-duty gear boxes, one a 90 degree beater drive, the other a two-speed worm box with bronze gear and steel worm; provide efficient power transmissions, smoother operation and long life.

NOW from case ih Comes MAXXUM™

the 2ND ALL-NEW TRACTOR from CASE IH...

This Tractor wasn't just built for farmers, it was built by farmers...

When CASE IH was ready to market this tractor in the summer of 1988, they asked a group of farmers to tell them what they would like to see changed to make it a better tractor. Over a dozen suggestions were offered. CASE IH delayed the introduction of the MAXXUM until they had made the improvements recommended by the farmers. The result: MAXXUM. The tractor designed and built with YOU IN MIND.

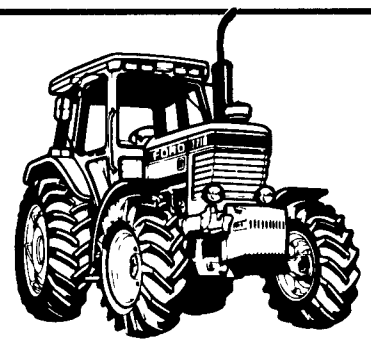
ABC GROFF - Your Ford New Holland Tractor Headquarters: Large, Small And In-Between!

100th 1890 ANNIVERSARY 1990

FORD... NEW HOLLAND... VERSATILE- AT ABC GROFF - The Winning Combinations!



Take Charge With Our Biggest Mid-Size Performer

Our 86-horsepower Model 7710 has big mid-sized power. The 268 cu. in. turbocharged diesel engine puts acres behind you fast. And it's fuel-efficient, too. Add these options and really take charge:

- 16x8 synchromesh Dual Power transmission that lets you shift on the go.
- Front-wheel assist gives you more traction and better control.
- Whisper-Quiet cab for a great place to work.

Is your tractor built as well as a Ford?

Ford New Holland put bigger engines in its smaller tractors

Ford compact diesels give you more power than you'd expect from a compact diesel They offer a bigger average cubic-inch displacement (CID) than leading competitors so the engine doesn't have to work as hard to generate its horsepower. And that means lower-rated engine speeds, less wear and noise and better fuel efficiency

Stop in and see the Comfortable Ones. There's one just right for you

The Versatile Bidirectional™ tractor

The Versatile® Bidirectional™ tractor operates in either direction, pushing or pulling whatever implement you need. With a Bidirectional tractor you:

- get four-wheel drive (4WD) pulling/pushing power.
- get a powerful 100-hp Ford turbocharged diesel engine.
- get a hydrostatic transmission that gives you the same speed and power selections in either direction.
- get a unique rotating console assembly that lets you rotate seat, steering wheel and instrument pod at the same time.
- get a wide choice of attachments to make the Bidirectional tractor the most productive tractor you can buy.

Stop in soon! See how a Versatile Bidirectional tractor can make your operation more efficient.

BEILER ENGINE SERVICE
LOMBARDINI Kawasaki

This twin 20 hp is becoming very popular for hay balers and other applications traditionally equipped with 2 cylinder Wisc. engines and can also replace the older 4 cylinder engines on some applications.

Works very well to run corn pickers, crimpers and mower crimper units. We can mount your Wisc. clutch reduction or sell the engine with used Wisc. reduction. We can pick up your clutch and deliver completed unit to you. (Lancaster County Only)

We offer in the field emergency service on baler engines.
Call Hoover Diesel at 717/786-7943 and they can contact us or our driver.

SILO CHUTE

Made With Fiberglass, The Material Of The Future - And Proven In The Past!

The Fiberdome chute is designed and engineered to be installed on most types of silos Its structure allows it to withstand the toughest beating the weather elements or silo unloading systems can possibly dish out

The chute is constructed in full 7½ ' sections to minimize the number of joints Connecting joints have a 2½ " tongue and groove design to keep feed in and water out. The large ribbed construction adds stability and strength

Fiberglass is durable, corrosion-proof, attractive and translucent, allowing sunlight to pass through Sunlight quickly dries interior moisture in the chute. The hard gleaming gelcote surface will remain for many years

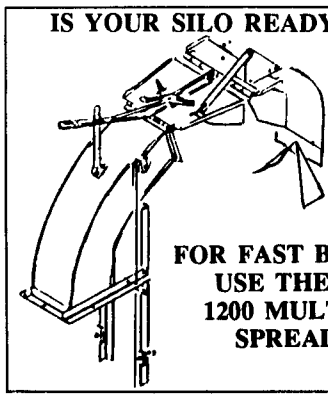
Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete

S & S Silo Serivce Has Experience
Over 700 Silos Have Been Relined With Shotcrete

IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH GRASS SILAGE?



FOR FAST BLOWING USE THE NEW 1200 MULTI-FLO SPREADER!

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

WARNING, ALL SILO OWNERS

Check Your Silo Now For Rotten Staves. If You Have Been Using Your Silo For 10 To 15 Years For Either Corn Silage Or Haylage, It Is Time To SHOTCRETE.

If you have a 15 year old silo... get it fixed or insure it better! But don't wait until the last minute to have it repaired because we may not be able to fix it if you wait too long.
REMEMBER your silo will not fall over when it's empty - it will fall over when it's full. It cannot stand on deteriorated concrete...

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.— A large turnout of members, some 150 strong, attended the 1990 annual meeting of the Virginia Angus Association in Roanoke. Besides officer and director elections, numerous members were honored during the banquet.

A new slate of leaders was voted into office. Roger Steele, Troutville, was elected president; Jim Coffey, Weyers Cave, president-elect; and Ed Richardson, Louisa, treasurer. Tom Templeton, Charlottesville, will stay on as executive secretary of the association.

Four new directors were elected to the board. They are Charles Cassell, Independence; Henry Morris, Chase City; Sue Rucker, Delaplane; and Bill Wampler, Harrisonburg.

The awards presentation followed the annual meeting, and the 1990 Virginia Angus Association Handbook was dedicated to Charles "Chilly" Peery, New Market, for his many years of service and contributions to the association. The new high-riding 230 Spra-Coupe makes spraying tall crops an easier task. The 230 combines a 50-inch ground clearance and outstanding coverage to help you tackle your tallest crops, including cotton.

A two-wheel wide front and hydraulic boom fold are standard on the 230. Crop deflectors and belly pan minimize damage by providing a smooth surface for crops as the 230 passes over.

With features like adjustable tread width and hydraulically adjustable boom height, the 230 is efficient in varying crop heights and widths. Also, the 230's dual brakes and power steering make turns in the field smoother and easier.

If you want your spraying operation to reach new heights, you need a 230 Spra-Coupe. See it at your nearest Melroe dealer.

Swine Info Meetings Keep 'Lines Open'

Dr. Richard Barczewski
Extension County Agricultural Agent
University of Delaware

The first major regional swine informational meeting was held in my area recently.

Despite some minor reservations in planning the event, it was a success. One of the interesting things about putting together educational meetings is that the planners need input on what the educational content of the meeting should be.

An extension agent or specialist can only guess at what producers would like to hear. The true value of a meeting is measured by the number of producers that attend and the amount of usable information producers take away.

Ultimately, we want producers to go home with ideas they can put into practice in their operations. So the real success or failure of an event like this can't be measured immediately.

Feedback on Meetings

Extension personnel want feedback on meetings from producers. Producers need to feel free to talk to their extension representatives to make certain that future meetings are planned around topics that are pertinent to them and their operations. What type of programs would you like to have in the future? What topics would you like to hear discussed?

As times change, so do the needs of the hog industry. That's one of the reasons why so many people at our regional meeting stayed to hear the final presentation on the Hatfield Lean Payment Program. Let's face it, lean payment programs will eventually affect everyone in the hog business.

New and innovative programs, management techniques, and products will always be of interest to the majority of pork producers who attend meetings. After all, in order to remain competitive in today's market, you need to take advantage of new technologies that fit into your management program. Where the snag comes in is when it's time to repeat a program that may not be getting the attention it deserves. For that reason, it's important that you make yourself heard when you meet your extension agent.

If you have a problem on your farm, your extension agent can provide you with suggestions for improvement or consult with a specialist who can give that assistance. If you would like to see a program designed around a particular topic or issue, don't keep quiet about it. Make your needs known.

Information Networking

Information and information networking can help keep the hog industry competitive. Extension agents and specialists are not mind readers. On those occasions when we've had to guess what you want to hear, it's hit or miss. With your input, the result can always be a direct hit.

The success of education meetings depends upon open lines of communication between producers and those who provide educational programs to producers. We not only want to hear from you, we need to hear you. Sometimes negative comments are more important than positive because they indicate we missed the mark.

Let your extension agents know how you feel about the program of any other meeting you have attended recently. Having worked in extension for five years, I can't tell you how many times I assisted with a program and never had feedback, good or bad, about the event. This just leaves a big question mark as to whether the meeting was interesting and useful.

So every time you see your extension agents, let them know about meetings you find interesting and helpful and those which had nothing to offer. We need your input if we are going to meet your needs.

I've heard it said that we are in the Communication Age. Let's make every effort to keep the lines of communication open and our swine informational meetings relevant.

Easements Gain Strength

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee has approved legislation to strengthen the legal validity of conservation and preservation easements -- contracts that are frequently used to protect natural, historic, and scenic resources from destruction and development.

The bill's prime sponsor is state Rep. Samuel Morris, who is chairman of the committee and a leading legislative advocate on behalf of conservation.

Morris, a Chester County Democrat, says he has worked with conservation organizations over much of the past year to develop the legislation because Pennsylvania has no statute that applies to the work conservancy groups are doing in this legal area.

Easements are acquired by conservation groups interested in the preservation of a property because of its unique natural, historic, or recreational value. The easements become part of the title to the property and are binding on subsequent owners.

Morris said the bill is supported by local, state, and national conservation groups, including The French and Pickering Creek Conservation Trust, The Brandywine Conservancy, Western Pennsylvania Conservancy, Open Land Conservancy of Chester County, Berks County Conservancy.

PULVI-MULCHERS
Brillion's Pulvi-Mulchers are one-pass secondary tillage tools that provide clod-free seedbeds.
The front rollers of the Pulvi-Mulcher break up surface clods. "C" shaped ribbon teeth or "S" spring tine teeth break up the soil to six inches in depth and pull clods to the surface. The rear roller wheels then crush those clods and convert the soil into a firmed, mulched seedbed that locks in moisture at the root level.
The result is a uniformly firmed and tilled seedbed from top to bottom, but not compacted. You get the full benefit of the capillary action of the soil for better germination, better moisture condition and faster decomposition of trash.

ROLLER WHEELS
The fact that Brillion leads the industry in the sale of Pulverizers and Pulvi-Mulchers is because all Brillion Roller Wheels are made in Brillion's own modern foundry. This directly affects the cost and quality of these machines and gives Brillion a considerable advantage over the competition.
Brillion's newest design, a 20", six spoke ductile iron notched wheel (five-year limited warranty against breakage.)

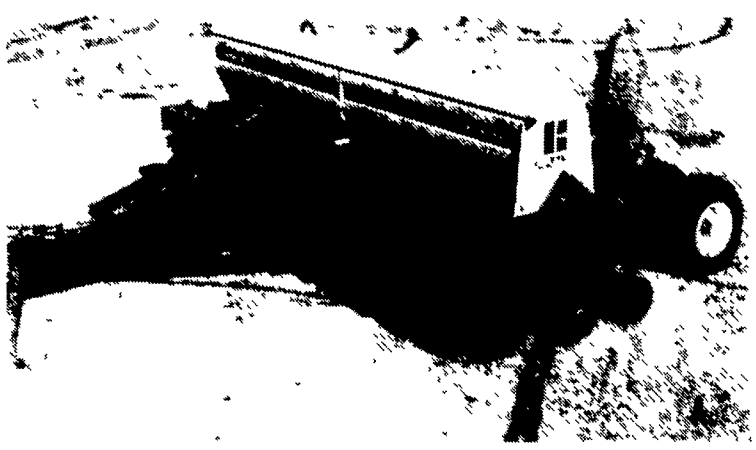
Plow Operates In Heavy Trash Conditions



Krause Plow announces the 1990 models of the 5200 Series no-till grain drill. The 5200 Series is available in 13 foot and 15 foot models with row spacing of 6 inches, 7-½ inches, or 10 inches. A weight transfer hitch allows the operator to adjust the coulter down-pressure by transferring weight from the tractor to the coulters.

HUTCHINSON, KS — To comply with conservation guidelines, the 1990's planting equipment will be required to operate in heavy trash conditions. To perform in these conditions, Krause Plow Corporation is announcing the 1990 models of the proven 5200 Series no-till grain drill.

The 5200 Series is available in 13' and 15' models with row spacing of 6'', 7½ '', or 10''.

A unique weight transfer hitch allows the operator to adjust the coulter down pressure by transferring weight from the tractor to the coulters, which reduces the amount of extra weight required for penetration. Built-in hitch flexibility allows the drill to traverse uneven ground while maintaining optimum opener-to-soil contact.

Down pressure of 250 pounds per row allows the staggered double-disc opener to slice through the ground for uniform seed placement. A variety of press wheels is available, including new cast iron 1'' x 12'' dual-press wheels. Coulter options include ripple, fluted, or bubble style. an optional weight bar, containing 750 pounds, is also available.

Claas GmbH Posts $641 Million In Sales

COLUMBUS, Ind.— Claas GmbH has released its fiscal results for the year ended September 30, 1989. For the tenth out of the last 11 years, Claas recorded profitable results on sales in excess of $641 million dollars. These sales represented a 10 percent increase over the previous year. Net income also improved by 34 percent.

Another important results was a 5 percent increase in employment, with total employees now reaching the 5,600 level. Equity capital also improved by 14 percent to $127 million.

Helmut Claas, chairman of the board, reported at the annual press conference in Europe in February, "I see further positive developments in overseas markets. In North America, the lowest point in the valley has been reached, but it is still difficult to predict what level of investment farmers will achieve. Our joint venture in India for the production of harvest machinery is currently being finalized with the Indian government. The cooperative venture in China for development of a small rice combine is proceeding as planned."

Payroll Software Helps Ease IRS Chore

RED WING, Minn.— Year-end changes in Internal Revenue Service regulations now place an added burden on agricultural employers.

Farm operators who are required to withhold Social Security (FICA) taxes from their employees' cash earnings now must also withhold federal income taxes. And, in some cases, withholding is required on state income taxes as well.

"Farmers should review their individual payroll systems today to be sure they are within proper tax compliance," according to Lyle Warrington, president of Red Wing Business Systems of Red Wing, Minnesota.

Failure to properly withhold taxes and/or failure to make timely deposits with the IRS could lead to costly and/or penalties.

"Fortunately, there's an easy way of dealing with this new challenge. Red Wing's Payroll computer software allows farm operators to automatically make the appropriate tax deductions from employee paychecks and generate the necessary reports. Our payroll software will allow farmers to avoid costly penalties and to minimize confusion," said Warrington.

Warrington also noted farm operators enjoy having the option of previewing and modifying checks before they are actually printed, and Red Wing's Payroll software allows that flexibility.

Farm operators often have different pay arrangements for different types of work. Red Wing's Payroll System allows up to 40 different earnings categories for each employee. It allows for salary, hourly, overtime, piecework, bonus, and other types of pay.

Red Wing's Payroll System also makes it easy to monitor labor costs by project, account number, rate, pieces, time for pieces, location, profit center, and many other categories. In addition, Red Wing's Payroll software can provide other management information, including employee time and pay history records, calculation of vacation and sick time, complete tax reports, and W-2 forms. Plus, it maintains some personnel information, including birth date, retirement date, termination date, and ethnic and sex code for EEO reporting.

For more information, contact your Red Wing dealer or Patricia Brown at Red Wing Business Systems, 610 Main Street, Red Wing, MN 55066, (612) 388-1106.

'Ally' Herbicide For Pasture Use

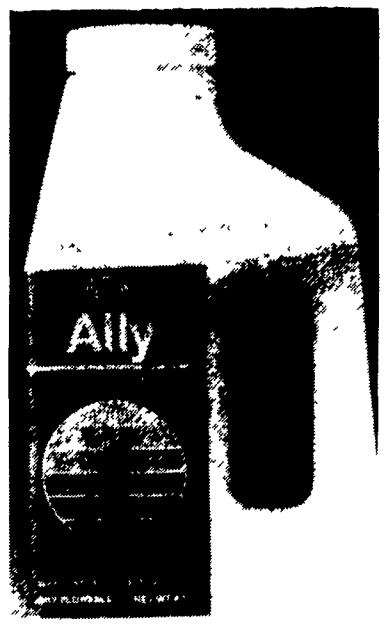
WILMINGTON, Del.— New Du Pont "Ally" herbicide has received label registration from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for use on hay meadows and pastures. The newly-labeled herbicide is a tool producers can use to improve stands of preferred grasses.

"Ally" herbicide wipes out a broad spectrum of broadleaf weeds, including some that, when eaten by cattle, can taint milk. But at labeled rates, "Ally" doesn't harm bluegrass, bromegrass, orchardgrass, timothy, bermudagrass, or several other native grasses. Tests also show adequate crop safety occurs on fescue at very low application rates.

"Many broadleaf weeds that infest pastures and hay fields are controlled by 'Ally' herbicide," said Phillip Hathcock, Du Pont sales specialist. "Producers can use 'Ally' to improve stands of preferred grasses for enhanced livestock feed quality and higher market value of hay and forage."

Weeds labeled for control with "Ally" include musk thistle, wild garlic, buckbrush, pigweed, bitter sneezewood, and buttercup.

The label recommends applying "Ally" at low use rates of just 0.1 ounce to 0.3 ounces per acre. "The rate to use depends upon the type of forage grasses present and weeds present," Hathcock says. "Slightly higher rates may be used in spot applications to control multiflora rose, Canada thistle, and blackberry."



Du Pont's "Ally" herbicide has been granted registration by the EPA for use on hay meadows and pastures.

Most pasture herbicides such as 2,4-D and some other have a seven-day or longer grazing restriction. "Ally" has no grazing restriction, which gives livestock producers flexibility in deciding when and where to graze livestock.

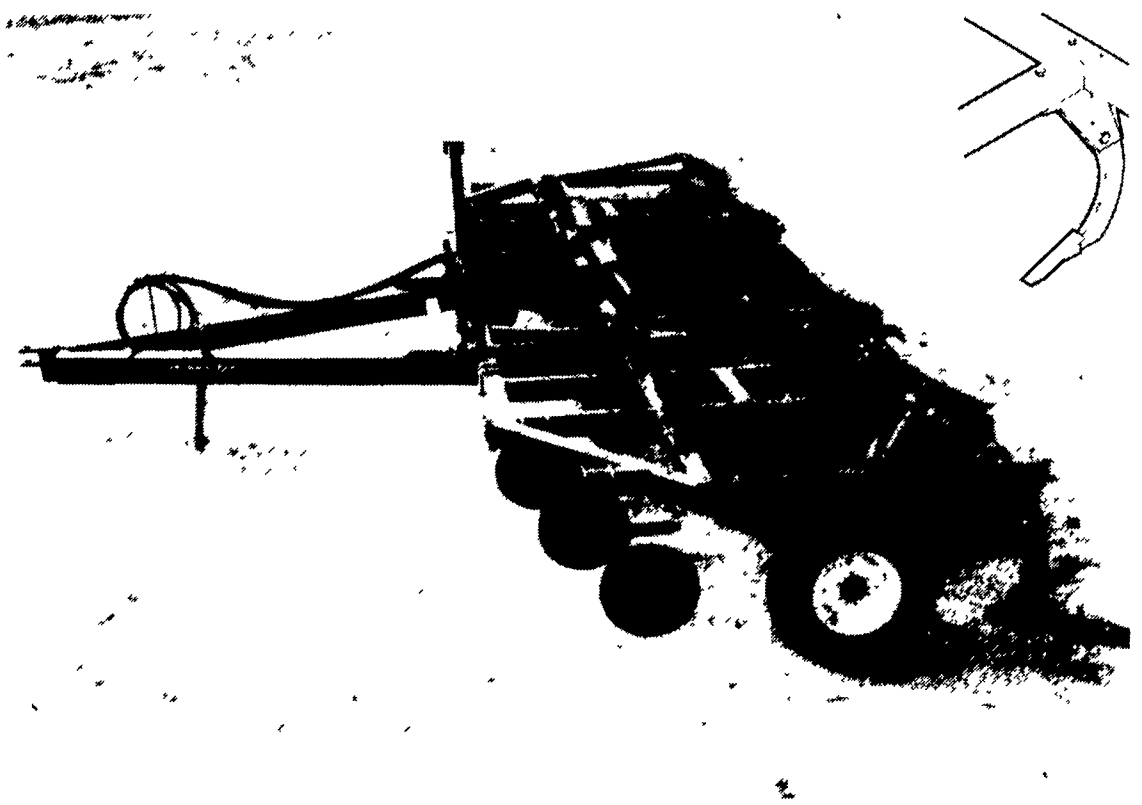
Farm Planning Software

MOUNTVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Cornucopia farm planning computer software helps budget and manage expenses for 30 different enterprises, including berries, grains, livestock, tree fruit, vegetables, and speciality areas.

Menus and modular design allow farm operators to put together detailed budgets. The software helps to budget and manage expenses; allows farmers to try out different crop/livestock mixes; helps make financial projections; and is easily modified for different varieties, yields, and prices.

Requirements are an IBM PC/XT/AT, PS/2, or compatible with 640K RAM. Contact Amber Waves Software, 202D Central Manor Rd., Mountville, PA 17554, (717) 285-3734.

PLAINS PLOW Has Optional Sweep Blade



Kent Manufacturing Company, Inc., of Tipton, Kansas announces the new PLAINS PLOW for stubble mulch tillage. Optional 36-inch sweeps for secondary tillage or 30-inch centers give a 6-inch overlap to control weeds in summer fallow ground or seed bed preparation in stubble mulch conditions. Easy conversion allows parabolic ripper points for primary tillage that will shatter the ground up to 10 inches deep after harvest. The PLAINS PLOW allows the worked ground to capture moisture and prevent wind and water erosion and is available from 23-foot, 3-section to 33-foot, 5-section. Contact Kent Hake, Sales Mgr., Kent Mfg. Co., Inc., Box 126, Tipton, KS 67485, (913) 373-4145.

Ford Tractor Features Stronger Frames

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.)— The new Model 9030 Ford biderectional tractor features stronger frames and cast axle tubes for added durability. Three-point linkage lift capacity has been increased to 6,500 pounds at the cab end. Engine-end 3-point SAE lift capacity is 3,000 pounds, a 1,000-pound increase.

Steering force on the new 100-hp (PTO) "9030" has been increased through the use of double-acting cylinders. In the cab, the operator seat and control console rotate 180 degrees so the operator can face either direction for best work efficiency.

With drawbar, PTO and 3-point linkage available for either or both ends, implements can be pulled or pushed. For New Holland Product Manager Jim Payton points out that for planting, a harrow and spray boom can be pushed ahead and a planter trailer behind the tractor for single-pass work.

An auger header and conditioner adapter converts the "9030" from a farmstead loader tractor to a self-propelled windrower in minutes. Hydraulically driven by the tractor system, headers are available for 12-, 14- or 16-foot cut.

Payton points out the extreme versatility of the bidirectional tractor has inspired both farmers and non-farm users to make their own adaptations for special purpose work. Vegetable producers find the clearance and hydrostatic drive appropriate for planting, cultivating, or harvesting. Cranberry growers find it excellent for spraying and work in bogs. Contract installers have chosen it to carry vibra-plow cable plows to install hundreds of miles of telephone and fiberoptic cable. Others have mounted heavy-duty rotary cutters for cross-country right-of-way maintenance.

"We're testing a variety of implements to add to the range that farm and industrial users have figured out on their own," said Payton. Municipalities, for example, find it a near ideal dual-purpose power unit with a snow blower for removing deep drifts and a loader for loading snow into dump trucks.

For year-round maintenance and pothole repair, towns have mounted a scraper blade on the engine end and use the loader on the cab end of the unit.

With pallet forks, the bidirectional becomes a rough terrain lift truck that simplifies and speeds construction work, sewer repair or road building. The loaders' large bucket capacity is excellent for moving gravel from a stockpile for sewer or culvert pipe placement. When the pipe and gravel are in place, the bidirectional can quickly complete the backfill and grading because of excellent operator visibility and control flexibility.

Hydrostatic four-wheel drive with three-range transmission provides the "9030" with ample torque and ground speed flexibility for the widest range of farmstead or light tillage work, said Payton. For loader work, excellent visibility from the operator platform boosts productivity to make the new "9030" an ideal choice for building contractors and municipalities, also.

Other improvements on the "9030" include a maximum operating weight increase from 13,500 to 16,000 pounds; a 3-inch longer wheel base; and maximum steering articulation increase to 36 degrees.

The new Ford bidirectional Model 9030 tractor features stronger frames and cast axle tubes for increased load rating for both cab- and engine-end implements. Operator seat and console rotate inside the cab for maximum work visibility for pushed or pulled implements.

Last year, more value-minded farmers picked Massey-Ferguson than any other make.

In fact, one of every five tractors now sold in the Western World is an M-F. Which makes Massey-Ferguson the Western World's largest tractor manufacturer.

One of the big reasons for this popularity is the great value of the 50-90 PTO hp line of M-F 300 Series tractors.

They all give you the torque, economy and reliability of world-famous Perkins diesel engines and all the advantages of advanced Ferguson system hydraulics. Plus you get the practical features you want, like hydrostatic steering as standard equipment.

Massey-Ferguson engineers put a lot of time and effort into designing these tractors to save more of your time and effort. They're incredibly easy to operate and maintain. And they have one of the best reliability records of any tractor ever made.

Better ask your M-F dealer soon to show you why an M-F 300 Series tractor can be the best value for your hard-earned investment.

Practical choices.

Farm Subsidy Elimination Benefits Economy

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Eliminating farm support would help the overall U.S. economy, according to a Penn State economist.

"If farm supports are eliminated, farm prices will go up and so will market-generated farm income," said Dr. Maureen Kilkenny, assistant professor of economics. "Farmers who leave agriculture will be employed elsewhere in the economy. The resulting change in the pattern of employment will cause an expansion of the gross national product."

Congress must pass a new 1990 Farm Bill by Dec. 31, when the present Farm Bill — the Food Security Act of 1985 — expires.

Farm subsidies worldwide are also a major item on the agenda of the latest round of general agreement on tariffs and trade (GATT) negotiations that began in Uruguay in 1986 and should conclude by the end of this year..

The administration favors an increased market orientation for farmers in both the new farm bill and the GATT negotiation. Any inconsistencies between two will force Congress to amend the farm bill in keeping with the GATT.

"We used to think farm subsidies were good for the economy. My research indicates that eliminating them will be good for the economy," Kilkenny said. "I estimate the economic gains from complete elimination of subsidies to be $17 in additional GNP for every $100 not spent on farm programs."

Her conclusions are based on a computer model of 400 equations to simulate the impact of eliminating farm subsidies on all sectors of the economy. Some of her findings were quoted in the Economic Report of the President, presented to Congress last month.

Many of the major exporters of agricultural products — not just the United States — have maintained farm subsidies for decades, she indicated. As a result, farm output has been too high and market prices have been depressed to the point where farmers would have to struggle to make a living without the subsidies.

Kilkenny's study projects that, if subsidies vanish, about 180,000 people will leave the agricultural sector within the next 5 to 10 years. She notes, however, that 208,000 farmers left agriculture in the period of 1980-1985.

Eliminating subsidies also will affect food-processing industries and manufacturers of fertilizer and farm implements.

A second imperative for eliminating farm subsidies is to balance the federal budget. "Does it make economic sense to subsidize one segment of the economy and not others?" she said.

More than 50 percent of the income to American grain farmers comes from government farm subsidy payments. This support has induced excess capacity in agriculture and resulted in extremely low market prices.

Kilkenny said, "My research indicates that without farm subsidies, everybody would be better off on average. There will be some adjustment costs, however, as the changes in farm policies induce inefficient farmers out of agriculture."

kool-cel T.M. ACME'S KOOL-CEL EVAPORATIVE COOLING PAD SYSTEM

Kool-Cel Pads

Kool-Cel pads are cellulose cooling cells 4" and 6" deep, 12" wide and available in 12" increments from 24" to 72" tall with two pieces of 4" combined to make 84" and 96" tall pads. The cooling cells are made from a specially formulated cellulose paper impregnated with insoluble antirot salts. It is designed with an exclusive cross-fluted configuration which induces highly turbulent mixing inside the pad between the water and the air, and contributes to the evaporative efficiency. The cross-fluted design makes Kool-Cel a strong self-supporting pad with high evaporative efficiency and low pressure drop (resistance to air flow).

A face velocity of 250 feet per minute for 4" an 400 feet per minute for 6" is recommended for the most economical cost and operation of the Kool-Cel system.

Farm Issues Addressed On Tour

EXTON (Chester Co.)— Nine members of the Chester/Delaware Farmers' Association took the annual legislative tour sponsored by the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) to Washington to visit their local congressman recently.

Senator Arlen Spector spoke to the group at the breakfast meeting with the attendees. Congressman Richard Schulze addressed the group at their evening banquet.

Making the trip were directors Richard Breckbill, Oxford; Robert Lange, Malvern; and David Herr, Parkesburg; and members Charles Wollaston, Toughkenamon; Harold Martin, Oxford; Elmer Mast, Parkesburg; Harold Kulp, Pottstown; Albert Bartels, West Grove and Marshall Haws, Information Director. They visited the offices of Richard Schulze, Curt Weldon, and Robert Walker.

The Farmers' Association spokesmen covered priority issues that affect Chester County farmers. These issues included the proposed 1990 Farm Bill, including acreage flexibility, freedom for farmers to respond to market conditions, competitiveness in the market place, and returning the dairy industry to a supply-demand balance. Congressmen were asked to shift emphasis from milk fat to a milk solids basis if support prices are continued.

Congressmen were also asked to oppose tax increases and support a spending freeze and capital gains protection for land, livestock, and timber. They were also asked to restructure the Legal Services Corporation so that the objective of the legislation is achieved without harrassing farmers and businessmen.

Farmers pointed out that they and other self-supporting taxpayers should be permitted to deduct 100 percent of their health insurance costs to counter increasing health premiums.

Farmers were told that bills have been introduced to make it a federal crime to disrupt, vandalize, and destroy property and/or steal animals in the name of animal welfare. Additional legislation would extend these protections to farm or agricultural research facilities.

The American Farm Bureau, Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, and local members have a vital interest in supporting a new farm bill that continues to promote competitiveness of our products, provides market orientation in the use of resources, and allows producers to make marketing and production decisions, the Chester/Delaware group explained to the Congressmen. The group supports the general direction of the 1985 farm bill.

"I am concerned about agricultural trade with non-market oriented economies," Schulze told the group. It is difficult to trade with countries who follow a non-market approach of subsidies for their farmers and other businesses. "At the general agreement on tariff trade (GATT), the United States must negotiate from a position of strength.

"Six years ago, the Soviets had little or no comprehension of profit as used in the United States. Currently, they seem to grasp the function and need for profit to organize their economic system."

In answer to a question about American loans to Russia, Schulze stated, "When the Russians trade with us, they have resources -- oil and minerals as examples -- to trade for our products. We do not need to make them loans of taxpayer's funds.

"Increases in the prices of residences, land, timber and livestock are due to inflation," Schulze explained. People are being penalized with a capital gains tax. If parents are forced to sell their home to pay hospital bills or other emergencies, they are burdened with capital gains taxes. I would go further in reducing the tax on capital gains than the President is willing to accept. Punitive tax rates are a threat to all property owners -- not just farmers.

"Seventeen out of 23 Congressmen from the Pennsylvania delegation are co-sponsors of the Farmily Farm Preservation bill (HR 2336). We need the support of the press and state farm organizations," Schulze said.

Americans must be alerted to the inequities of taxing farm land and same as development land. The legislation initially defers estate taxes. As long as the land stays in agriculture, the estate tax will be phased out over a 30-year period. The legislation only applies to areas around urban centers. Robert Lange, Malvern, contacted several members of the Ways and Means Committee. He was promised serious consideration for his proposal.

Spokespersons from around the state indicated that a majority of their congressmen either endorsed or were not opposed to the positions presented by members of the PFA. Congressmen agreed that the excesses of the Legal Services Corporation must be curbed. They agreed to address the inequities that presently exist in the federal wetlands regulations and application.

The spirit of spending cuts and tax cuts permiated the discussions. While the 1990 Farm Bill is still in the discussion stage, they appreciated the comments and suggestions of the farmers association members.

While it is recognized that not all objectives of the association policy may be adopted because of the political process, Chester/Delaware farmers appreciated the time and consideration given them by the congressmen and their office assistants. The members felt that they had been provided a hearing for their concerns and that the congressmen would apply their concerns in the deliberations on the upcoming legislation.

1990's: Decade Of The Wetland

WETLANDS

According to Ralph Heimlich of the USDA's Economic Research Service, the 1990's may be the "Decade of the Wetland". Changes in U.S. land-use and conservation policies are aiming at preserving and restoring wetlands.

If you don't have a wetland in your backyard, there's probably one nearby. There's one in every county in the United States, according to the Environmental Protection Agency.

Wetlands are mostly semi-aquatic lands. They are either constantly or periodically covered or saturated with water. The presence of water makes them hydric, or capable of supporting specially adapted plants like bulrushes, cattails, and cypress.

There is a large variety of wetlands — swamps, bogs and marshes. Most are always wet, but some, like the prairie potholes in the Midwest, are dry much of the year. There are two broad categories, coastal and inland. Coastal wetlands are linked to estuaries where sea and fresh water mix. Many shallow coastal areas are unvegetated mud or sand flats. Marshes are abundant along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. Mangrove swamps are common in Hawaii and in southern Florida.

Inland wetlands are most common on floodplains beside rivers and streams. They are also found along the margins of lakes and ponds and in isolated depressions surrounded by dry land. Inland wetlands include marshes and wet meadows, shrub swamps, and wooded swamps. Some regional examples are the pocosins in North Carolina, prairie potholes in Minnesota and the Dakotas, and the tropical rain forests of Hawaii.

Historically, wetlands were viewed as pest-ridden wastes to be reclaimed for useful purposes. For many years no one noticed their environmental benefits or their rapid disappearance.

In 1763, George Washington formed a company to drain for agriculture the Great Dismal Swamp on the border of Virginia and North Carolina. While his project failed, his attitude toward wetlands foreshadowed policy for nearly two centuries. The swamp in question has now been made a preserve.

Wetlands in the public domain were given to states to administer under the Swamp Lands Acts of 1849, 1850 and 1860. Florida, for example, sold the Everglades and Okefenokee wetlands for less than 50 cents an acre. Today, Iowa has lost about 95 percent of its natural marshes, and California more than 90 percent of its wetlands. Other states, including Connecticut, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota and North Dakota, have lost about 50 percent of their wetlands, according to the National Wildlife Federation.

Ecologists and biologists were the first to recognize the environmental value of wetlands as some of the world's richest ecological stews. They nourish such diverse wildlife as alligators in the Florida Everglades, whooping cranes in Texas, muskrats in Iowa and ducks in the prairie potholes in Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota.

Wetlands are coveted by environmentalists and hunters alike. They not only provide a habitat for wildlife but also help maintain groundwater supplies and water quality, protect shorelines from erosion, store floodwater, and trap sediments.

FARMERS HOME ADMINISTRATION-- GUARANTEED LOANS

The Farmers Home Administration (FmHA), may guarantee loans made by eligible agricultural lenders to family farmers for farm ownership, improvements and operating purposes.

Guaranteed loans are those loans made by banks and other commercial lenders, such as Federal Land Bank and Production Credit Associations, where FmHA agrees to guarantee a certain percentage to the lender in case of loss.

Guaranteed farm ownership loans can be used to buy, improve or enlarge farms. Guaranteed operating loan purposes include purchases for farm operations, such as livestock, equipment and chemicals. Guaranteed soil and water loans can be used to develop, conserve and make proper use of land and water resources.

Interest rates on guaranteed loans are negotiated between the lender and borrower. Terms for repayment vary according to loan purpose and nature of operating loan.

You can receive more information on guaranteed loans at the Farmers Home Administration Office located at the Lehigh County Agricultural Center, Suite 107, 4184 Dorney Park Road, Allentown, PA 18104. Phone (215) 395-2052. The County Supervisor is Thomas A. Wellington, III. Farmers may apply directly to private lenders or by contacting FmHA. All applications for FmHA guaranteed loans are treated with equal consideration, without regard to sex, age, race, color, religion, handicap, national origin or marital status.

TWENTY WAYS TO REDUCE RISK OF INJURY TO FARM KIDS

1. No seat - no rider. Do not allow children to be extra riders, even if they are helping out with chores or other work.
2. Idle machinery are not farm toys. Keep children from playing on, in or under machinery and equipment.
3. Leave electrical, pneumatic, and hydraulically operated equipment in the down or closed position.
4. Place gear selections in Park, or set brakes, and remove ignition keys from tractors and self-propelled machinery.
5. Keep PTO in neutral when not using.
6. Know where the kids are when starting machinery and farm vehicles.
7. Keep shields and guards in place and in working order.
8. Train and supervise youth operating farm machinery and equipment.
9. Fence farm ponds and manure pits.
10. Keep ladders out of the reach of children.
11. Lock up electrical power sources.
12. Lock up chemicals.
13. Use warning decals and signs. Replace old warnings when they fade or become unreadable.
14. Keep workable lights and reflectors on all mobile agricultural machinery.
15. Keep small children from large animals, particularly animals that have recently given birth.
16. Do not let children under 12 operate an ATV.
17. Close grain and hay drop openings in barns.
18. Keep children from playing on or in silos and grain bins.
19. Keep children away from freshly-filled silos.
20. Have monthly family farm safety reviews.

Ag Secretary Speaks To Farmers Union

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Secretary of Agriculture Clayton Yeutter outlined 25 acres of potential agreement in goals and objectives between himself and the National Farmers Union at the farm organization's convention recently.

In a list of policies which ranged from helping lesser-developed nations in order to develop long-term markets for U.S. agricultural products to keeping interest rates down, Yeutter said he hoped the administration and the farm group could find many areas in which to work for common goals for American agriculture.

Yeutter's list of common goals with the farm group included working towards reducing the federal budget deficit, lessening reliance on energy imports, counteracting unfair trade practices, and the need for sharing costs among nations for carrying world food reserves.

He noted basic agreement with the farm group in its call for a multi year, set-aside program for conservation purposes, marketing loans for rice and cotton, the continuation of the Food for Peace program, and encouraging voluntary testing of water wells.

Other examples of common concern included the targeting of farm program benefits, updating of milk marketing structures, concern over concentration within the livestock industry, and the need for redirecting the conservation reserve program.

Yeutter said he has not been able to figure out how to make targeting work and wasn't prepared to recommend specific actions or programs on some of the other areas of agreement with the Farmers Union. However, he said he wanted continued input from the farm group on its concerns and directions.

The USDA secretary also outlined primary differences between him and the farm group. Price and income programs and the approach to international trade negotiations were listed as primary areas of disagreement by Yeutter.

Acknowledging a two-tier price system as an alternative for current-price support policy, Yeutter argued the system may work in concept, but not in reality.

He told the farm convention he believed a two-price system would meet consumer resistance and was inconsistent with current U.S. trade policy. "We are trying to get rid of the world of two-tiered pricing systems," he said.

Yeutter argued that American producers had been hampered in gaining export markets because of the two-price systems of other nations.

International trade negotiations to liberalize agricultural trade are totally, completely, and fully in the interest of American agriculture, he said.

Presenting his case to National Farmers Union delegates, Yeutter said, "There isn't any danger that we are going to be out-negotiated or that the sky is going to fall on agriculture in these negotiations."

Yeutter said that American farmers would be winners if the trade negotiations resulted in a more level-playing field. "If we aren't better off at the end of these negotiations, we should not be there," he said.

He said the administration's objective in the trade talks were to phase out all agricultural export subsidies. He also cited the need to convert non-tariff barriers, such as quotas to tariffs to eliminate variable levies and to end various minimum price import pricing and licensing schemes.

The agriculture secretary said American farmers would be winners overall if export subsidies and import barriers were eliminated. "I think in the agregate we are competitive with producers in other nations," he said. Yeutter did acknowledge that not all sectors in agriculture would benefit from the trade negotiations.

Yeutter also discussed differences in budget priorities between him and the farm group. "We are not likely to get more dollars for agricultural spending," he said.

He indicated that the budget committees of Congress determined the level of federal dollars available for agriculture, not the agriculture committee. Similarly, he said, the administration as a whole sets its spending priorities, not just the agriculture secretary.

U.S. Grain Exports Topic Of Meeting

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The growth and future of U.S. grain exports dominated the presentations at the recent U.S. Feed Grains Council board of directors meeting held in New Orleans, Louisiana.

The theme of the meeting, held March 4-7, was "Building on Success" and featured speakers from government and industry.

U.S. agricultural exports for fiscal year 1990 are forecast at $38.5 billion. According to F. Paul Dickerson, general sales manager and associate administrator of the Foreign Agricultural Service, forecasts for foreign imports of coarse grains have risen and U.S. corn is expected to capture a larger share of foreign markets. Dickerson pointed out that U.S. coarse grain exports are estimated at 66.5 million metric tons, the highest level since FY-81.

Dean Kleckner, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, stated that U.S. agriculture is headed into the 1990s with much in its favor. "U.S. agricultural trade, as always, boasted a trade surplus," he said, noting that agricultural exports grew 9 percent in 1989. "Export expansion is a good route to increased farm prosperity," according to Kleckner, and farmers are interested in export expansion. "Farmers know that efficient production depends on full production." he said. "There is increasing recognition that you can't 'non-produce' your way to prosperity."

The importance of the western corn belt to U.S. corn exports has grown in recent years, according to William A. Dodds, grain group merchandising manager for The Andersons. The eastern corn belt, defined as Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan and Ohio, has experienced steadily increasing domestic usage, increasing from 800 million bushels (20 million metric tons) in 1975 to 1,300 mbu (33 mmt) projected for 1990. At the same time, domestic usage of corn is up and production is down in the Southern states.

Additional corn from the western belt will be required to meet increased foreign and domestic demand. Western corn belt states, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and Wisconsin, witnessed increased exports from 1.1 bbu (28 mmt) to 2.05 bbu (52 mmt) between 1935 and 1989.

Dodds added that, in addition to a shift to the western states for exports, there was a shift over the last 10 years in the use of coastal ports. The Atlantic and lake ports have seen lower shipment levels, while the Texas Gulf and Pacific ports have shipped more corn, 6.5 percent and 14.6 percent increases respectively, over the past 10 years.

The key to the world debt situation is export programs, according to Wayne Andersen, vice president of the National Bank for Cooperatives. "I believe we have seen the worst of the debt situation," Anderson said. "The major factor now is finding ways to continue to supply the needs of debtor nations through government-supported programs."

The United States is facing the 1990s with projections of relatively rapid domestic and export market growth, reported J.B. Penn, senior vice president of Sparks Commodities, Inc. Penn reported on the U.S. Feed Grains Council's World Feed Grains Demand Forecast. As world coarse grain trade increases from 108 mmt in 1990 to more than 134 mmt by 1998, the United States is projected to continue supplying over 61 percent of the world coarse grain exports. The model projects a much closer balance between feed grain stocks and production during 1991 and 1998.

More Than $400,000 For Pork Research

DES MOINES, Iowa — The pork producers checkoff will provide $420,000 in seed money during the coming year for research projects in such areas as prevention and treatment of animals diseases, breeding and genetics, animal care, environmental management, nutrition, and market technology.

In 1990-91, 35 separate projects will receive seed money from producer checkoff funds, according to Dr. David Meeker, vice president of research and education for the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC).

The projects range from the use of a genetic amplification assay and support control and eradication of pseudorabies to pen shape and its effect on pig behavior and performance.

Each year, a committee of pork producers and researchers studies priorities for research funding as determined through polling of a random sample of producers, and through discussion during annual program development group sessions involving producers from across the nation. Project proposals submitted by the nation's leading researchers are judged on their feasibility and scientific merit as well as how they fit into the priorities established by pork producers.

Since 1971, when the program started, more than $3 million in producer checkoff funds have been invested in more than 400 separate research projects. In most cases, the producer funding is enhanced by additional funding from other sources, including the federal government. That makes the total impact much greater than the initial producer checkoff grant.

Pork Industry Group Chairman Addresses Delegate Body

LOUISVILLE, KY — The pork checkoff was a wise investment for producers during 1989, according to Don Benson, chairman of the Pork Industry Group of the National Livestock and Meat Board, during his report to the pork industry's Delegate Body here today.

Benson, a producer from Hurley, S.D., pointed out three areas he believes benefited pork producers during 1989: research, initiatives during the past 12 months to reach physicians, and a program called Ad Watch that combats advertising misrepresenting meat. "As pork producers, we have defined these three areas as priorities and when we see our checkoff dollars making things happen in these areas, we know we are on the right track," says Benson.

His remarks were part of the Annual Report to the Delegates delivered by the Pork Industry Group. As Benson put it, the purpose of this report is quite simple: "To constantly remain accountable to the industry for the pork checkoff dollars invested at the Meat Board."

A highlight of the report was an update on the Pork Market Basket Study, which is providing the data to update USDA's official pork nutrient profile. According to John Hardin, Danville, Ind., and Sharon Schwartz, Washington, Kan., the preliminary data from this study has convinced the USDA that a revision is necessary.

"Pork producers took it upon themselves to start the ball rolling to update the nutrient composition of pork and we will be seeing this become reality," says Schwartz. Hardin and Schwartz, both pork producers, co-chaired the industry committee overseeing the work to update the official data on pork's nutrient composition.

Tim Downey, vice president of the Pork Industry Group, gave an example of a checkoff-funded program that appears to be paying big dividends for producers. "A Change of Plate," the dietitians' teaching kit developed by the Meat Board, is reaching 14.7 million consumers a year, Downey says.

"Every time a kit is placed in the hands of a dietitian that uses it, our survey shows that 1,050 consumers are reached a year," Downey addes. Remarkably, the Meat Board found that almost 92 percent of dietitians with "A Change of Plate" use it.

Downey also gave an update of the Pork Industry Group's physician plan of action. A set of materials for internal medicine specialists has already been distributed and public relations programs are currently being planned for execution during the next year.

Benson concluded his remarks by commending the pork industry for its proactive stance on taking on advertising that gives consumers misconceptions about meat. The Meat Board Ad Watch program has successfully gained the cooperation of such big name advertisers as Kellogg's, General Mills and Kraft to remove their advertising that misrepresents meat.

"All of us in agriculture have been able to band together when the need arose and Ad Watch is a perfect example of how producers of pork, beef, lamb and veal can work together to accomplish a common goal," says Benson.

Ad Watch, along with some other information and research programs at the Meat Board are leveraged, or funded by checkoffs from pork, beef, lamb and veal industries. "This concept has made a tremendous impact on the ability to extend limited dollars for the good of the pork industry," Benson said.

According to Benson, one of his main concerns is that the pork industry "have a common information base" from which to make decisions. "Since my tenure began in August 1988, my dedication to this ideal has strengthened and this report is one way to accomplish this."

Benson's 19-month term as Pork Industry Group chairman will be completed at the Meat Board Annual Meeting March 18-19 in Chicago.

Study Guide Receives Honor

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.)— An educational study guide, entitled "Business Cooperatives and Youth," developed by the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives, was recently recognized by the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives (NCFC).

At the annual meeting of the NCFC in San Diego in January, "Business Cooperatives and Youth" received first place in the educational materials category of the Cooperative Education Fair.

According to Carol Buckhout, PAFC executive director, "to be recognized at the national level for this type of publication is truly an honor. As we educate youth across Pennsylvania and the Northeast about cooperative business principles, we can be proud that we are using a top-notch educational tool."

The Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives is an educational organization and trade association that promotes the cooperative way of doing business. Its membership includes 30 Pennsylvania and Northeast farm and rural cooperatives.

Lincomix Powder Controls Necrotic Enteritis

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has approved the use of Lincomix soluble powder in drinking water for the control of necrotic enteritis in broilers.

Lincomycin, the antibiotic in Lincomix, is active against Clostridium perfringens, the primary causative organism of necrotic enteritis. The approval is the first for this form of Lincomix in poultry, and it allows for a zero-day withdrawal period, making Lincomix a convenient therapy for controlling the disease.

According to Tom R. Schriemer, Upjohn clinical development poultry researcher, three well-controlled studies involving 7,650 broilers resulted in significant improvement in the control of necrotic enteritis in birds receiving Lincomix soluble powder as compared to control groups.

The studies involved treatment of broilers with varying degrees of necrotic enteritis from one day of age to market weight under varying geographical, weather and management conditions, said Schriemer.

The recommended dosage of Lincomix soluble powder for controlling necrotic enteritis, as determined from these studies, is 64 mg of lincomycin per gallon (one packet of Lincomix per 250 gallons) of drinking water for seven days.

NCGA: Plastic Report 'Environmental Cover-Up'

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The release of a Greenpeace-funded report, distorting the benefits of degradable plastics, was labelled as an "environmental cover-up" by a spokesman for the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA).

"While NCGA applauds Greenpeace for recognizing the need for environmental education to a vast majority of Americans, they unfortunately have been misled by an outside organization and wasted their member-generated funds for a gravely inadequate report," said Alan Kemper, NCGA president.

Kemper calls the report a "great collection of myths" and charges that much of the current degradable plastics research is conveniently ignored in the report.

"NCGA helped introduce cornstarch-based biodegradable plastic technology in this country nearly three years ago," Kemper continues, "and will continue to support the advancement of technology for this environmentally useful product."

"We face a tremendous waste disposal problem in our nation," Kemper said, "and the use of source reduction, recycling, and biodegradable plastics are three very logical choices available to address this ever-growing problem."

One of the most desirable uses for biodegradable plastics is in composting bags used to collect yard waste, which currently takes up an estimated 20-30 percent of the nation's sparse landfill space, according to Kemper.

Because the biodegradable plastic compost bag containing 6-10 percent cornstarch — degrades into water, carbon dioxide, and a soil-like material, the degraded bag and the decayed organic matter it contained can be used to strengthen soil fertility and structure, Kemper said.

Degradable plastic research has been conducted or is currently in progress at more than 15 public and private research institutes in the U.S., Great Britain, Sweden, and Japan, according to Kemper.

While the current technology has only been used in the U.S. since mid-1987, Kemper says ongoing research has already provided some answers to add to the environmental benefits and future market potential of starch-based biodegradable plastics.

"Our ultimate goal is to eventually have biodegradable plastics produced from 100 percent renewable corn products," Kemper said, "and research by several leading U.S. based companies suggests this is a near-term reality."

Annual sales of biodegradable plastics such as trash and merchandise bags, disposable diapers, and six-pack connectors are projected to grow from 50 million pounds in 1987 to 850 million pounds by 1992, according to industry sources.

Arabian Horse Auction To Benefit Cleft Palate Clinic

QUENTIN (Lebanon Co.) — See a host of beautiful horses, local crafts, and participate in or just enjoy viewing the Arabian Gelding Auction on Saturday, April 21, at the Quentin Riding Club Indoor Arena on Rt. 72 north of Pennsylvania Turnpike.

The South Central district of the Pennsylvania Arabian Horse Association (PAHA) is sponsoring the second annual auction to benefit the Lancaster Cleft Palate Clinic in recognition of the clinic's need to raise money for oral and facial treatment of patients from all walks of life. The two organizations also are committed to finding a cure for cleft palate, one of the most prevalent birth defects in the world.

Last year's auction raised more than $5,000 for the clinic, which was established by Dr. Herbert Kurtz Cooper Sr. in 1938 to meet the need for coordinated medical, plastic surgical, dental, psychological, speech, and hearing services for cleft palate patients.

The first of its kind, the Lancaster Clinic has served as a model for clinics across the country and in other nations. The clinic now offers administrative, medical, surgical, orthodontics, laboratory, speech, hearing, radiology, and dental services to patients with a variety of needs.

The day-long event to benefit the clinic will begin at 9:00 a.m. with an open barn to view the horses and investigate the services being sold. There will also be displays of riding equipment and information concerning equestrian care, as well as information about PAHA and the Lancaster Cleft Palate Clinic.

From 1 to 5 p.m., the auction of horses and boarding and training services will be held. Mailed bids will be accepted for training and boarding services only. From 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., there will be drawings for fabulous door prizes, fresh pastries, snacks, and hors d'oeuvres will be available between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.

All but 1 of the 16 registered horses are purebred Arabian geldings, known for their calm temperament, intelligence, and beauty. The one partbred Arabian horse is Serraffics Kandu, consistently in the ribbons and a Halter Reserve Grand Champion in Virginia.

Two other particularly impressive horses are HI Windsong, 1984 East Coast Champion Halter Gelding, winner of numerous championships and blue ribbons in halter and English pleasure classes, and Antares Asam, winner of seven major awards in English pleasure, park, and halter classes.

PAHA, the sponsoring organization, consists of numerous owners of purebred and partbred Arabian horses and others interested in Arabian horses, and is one of the strongest state organizations affiliated with the International Arabian Horse Association (IAHA). PAHA's seven regional districts offer numerous events, including the High Point Awards Program, Junior-Amateur Games (which include educational clinics); social activities; schooling show; competition; trail riding; endurance and research rides; and youth meetings.

To register as a bidder for the auction and to receive a sales catalog containing descriptions of the horses as well as terms and conditions of the sale, please write to: Ms. Christine Vasellas, R.D.1, Box 545, Red Lion, PA 17356, (717) 927-6443 or Charles H. Campbell, 223 N. Lime Street, Lancaster, PA 17602, (717) 396-7415. Include your name, address, and phone number with your request.

E.C. Smokey Knight is an Arabian Gelding to be sold at the auction on Saturday, April 21, at the Quentin Riding Club Indoor Arena. The South Central district of the Pennsylvania Arabian Horse Association (PAHA) is sponsoring the second annual auction to benefit the Lancaster Cleft Palate Clinic in recognition of the clinic's need to raise money for oral and facial treatment of patients from all walks of life.

NEW CALVES

To minimize losses from both deaths and slowed weight gain, it is very important to administer proper treatment when a calf is first noticed scouring.

Types Of Scours

A. Very sudden, severe scours in newborn calves during the first week of life. Treatment objective is to stop the scouring by interrupting the infection, to replace the electrolytes lost and promote healing of the intestine.

Treatment involves:

1. Use of oral antibiotic to prevent and control bacterial infection.
2. Use of oral fluids and minerals to correct dehydration and mineral imbalance.
3. Withhold milk for 24 to 36 hours to rest the gut and allow healing.
4. Supply heat to maintain body temperature between 100.5 and 102 degrees F.

B. Scours in older calves (one week of age and older). This type of scours is usually less severe, but still requires immediate treatment with oral antibiotics to minimize loss. There are several oral antibiotic preparations available locally and many more available through your veterinarian.

If scours do not improve markedly within 48 to 72 hours of treatment, change to another antibiotic product immediately. A drug to slow the gut would be strongly indicated at this point. Such drugs are available through veterinarians.

If the calf becomes dehydrated, dull, lies around, and shows poor appetite after a day or two of scouring, then nutritional and replacement treatment as outlined for the newborn calf may be necessary for the older calf. Consultation with your local veterinarian is advised in any case which turns severe or shows no signs of rapid recovery.

For more information on calfhood diseases and problems, please contact the Cecil County extension office.

BEEF MEETING

Cattlemen are urged to attend a beef meeting to be held on Thursday, April 12 at the Kent County, Delaware, extension office in Dover at 7:30 p.m.

At this meeting, Dr. Douglas Carmel, extension veterinarian from the U. of Maryland, will discuss vaccination programs for beef production.

In addition, Carmel will share with the audience some recent research findings involving vaccination programs.

FOALING TIME

A simple procedure can help you better pinpoint the time of foaling. Water hardness check strips are used to detect the amount of the minerals — calcium and magnesium — in water samples. These minerals also appear in colostrum. The concentration of these minerals increase prior to foaling, and the water hardness check strips can be used to detect the relative appearance.

The testing procedure is relatively inexpensive (about 25 cents per test) and simple to conduct. All you need is some test tubes, distilled water, a syringe, a container to obtain milk and the check strips. The check strips are readily available at hardware stores. Distilled water has to be used because it is relatively free of the minerals. A plastic baby bottle can be used to measure out the milk and water. The procedure is as follows:

1. Begin several days before the suspected foaling date.
2. Obtain about 10 cc's of milk by hand-milking into the baby bottle.
3. Using the syringe, draw out exactly 6 cc's of distilled water and then draw up exactly 1 cc of milk in the syringe.
4. The mixed sample is placed in a test tube that has a check strip in it.

The test strips that OSU routinely uses has four zones that change color with varying amounts of mineral concentration. One or two zone color changes usually indicate the mare is approaching foaling within 2 to 4 days. With three or four zone changes, most mares are expected to foal within 24 to 48 hours.

The test should be conducted daily when two zone changes are observed. It is suggested to move the mare to a foaling stall or paddock and start the observation when three or more zones change color. It is not a 100 percent accurate test, but it works on the majority of mares and its simple procedure and low cost will help save countless hours of sleep.

SHEEP UPDATE

The University of Maryland cooperative extension service of Cecil County will be sponsoring a sheep update meeting on Saturday, April 7, 1990 from 9 a.m. until 12 noon at the Cecil County Public Library on Route 279 in Elkton, Maryland.

Topics for discussion at this update will be "Decisions on Flock Health," by Dr. Ruthie Franczek; "Pasture and Grazing Management," by Robert D. Hallman; and "Major Diseases of Regulatory Concern," by Dr. Douglas Carmel. Various other topics will be handled with group discussions.

There is no charge for this workshop; however, preregistration is suggested. If you are planning to attend, please contact the Cecil County extension office, at (301) 398-0200 or (301) 658-4041, ext. 181.

GET READY FOR SHEARING

Believe it or not, now is the time to start getting ready for shearing. If you haven't done so already, contact your shearer to set a date. If you wait until April to make your contacts, you may find yourself waiting in the back of a long line. Shearers appreciate advanced planning on your part.

When it comes to the sheep flock itself, try to take the necessary precautions to avoid getting excess foreign matter in the fleeces. We all like to get top dollar for our wool, but unfortunately many shepherds don't pay close attention to this important product. Don't throw hay or grain over the backs of sheep and keep your pastures free of weeds such as cocklebur that can contaminate an otherwise clean crop of wool.

Now is also the time to start ordering your supplies for shearing day. Do you have a supply of paper twine to tie the fleeces? Some shearers may provide this as part of their service, so call them to make sure you don't need to order a supply. Another item that you may want to obtain is a burlap wool bag to transport your wool to the wool pool. If you only have a few sheep, wool can be stored in plastic garbage bags. Don't tie the plastic bags shut because the wool may mold from condensation, especially if it is damp. Store the tied and bagged fleeces in a dry place and never use old plastic feed sacks to store wool, because the loose fibers may contaminate the fleeces and result in a lower price.

Prior to the arrival of your shearer, make sure you sheep are kept dry. Wet sheep are a mess to shear and most shearers will refuse to attempt the task. In addition, have the sheep penned before the arrival of your shearer. Remember, you are paying the shearer to shear your sheep and not catch them. Be on hand to deliver the sheep to the shearer and tie fleeces. Sheep shearing is hard work and any help you can provide in catching sheep and tieing fleeces will be appreciated.

Make sure you pay your shearer upon the completion of the job. A sure way to lose a good shearer is to avoid paying them. Prices to shear can vary greatly depending upon the number of head to be shorn, the distance the shearer has to travel to your farm, and the amount of work that needs to be done to each sheep. Prices for shearing can range anywhere from $2.00 to $20.00 per head in this area. Avoid deworming and foot trimming the flock at shearing unless your shearer has agreed to the procedures ahead of time.

Finally, if you have trouble locating a shearer, contact your local extension office or check with other sheep producers in your area for suggestions.

SHEEP SHEARING SCHOOL

The University of Maryland extension service and the Maryland Sheep Breeders' Association will be sponsoring a two-day Sheep Shearing School on April 6 and 7 on the farm of Ridgely Thompson of Linwood, Maryland.

General topics of discussion will be the New Zealand method of shearing sheep, adjusting and caring for shearing machines, and proper techniques of handling wool after shearing.

The shearing school participation is limited to 30 people, so register early. Registration deadline is March 26 and the cost for the class is $10 per person. Directions to the Carroll County farm will be sent to registrants upon acceptance into the program.

For more information and a registration card, call Dave Greene, Carroll County ag agent, (301) 848-4611.

Landhope Farm, Kennett Square, Pennsylvania

Landhope Farms has been feeding the complete Purina Program since July 1986. Their program consists of corn silage, alfalfa haylage, cottonseed, high moisture shelled corn and a custom 32% (high fat product).

Don Poole, farm manager since 1985, used ingredients on the farm for his first year. Don stresses raising high quality forages as an important part of his management.

Don's comments about the Purina Program are as follows:

* "More consistent programming"
* "Realize higher peaks"
* "RHA has increased from 15,600 to 18,400"
* "Feed costs are nearly the same as ingredients"
* "Larger heifers that peak at 90 lbs."
